Court orders private schools to take blacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled today that private schools may not refuse black children because of their race and said whites as well as blacks are protected under the law aginst discrimination in private employment.

The court made the rulings in separate opinions. It was split 7 to 2 in deciding the private schools case. It ruled unanimously, but for two partial dissents, in the employment case involving so-called reverse discrimination.

In its opinion on private schools by Justice Potter Stewart, the court said such racial exclusionary policies are "a classsic violation" of federal civil rights law.

The court also rejected the argument that the application of civil rights law to school admissions is an unconstitutional invasion of the privacy of families.

In the private employment ruling, the court said the 1964 Civil Rights Act is "not limited to discrimination against members of any particular race." The court said the act "prohibits racial discrimination against the white petitioners in this case upon the same standards as would be applicable were they Negroes."

Justices Byron R. White and William H. Rehnquist dissented in the private schools opinion, saying that the decision was a "political task" which the court should not undertake.

The case revolved around an act passed after the Civil War guaranteeing all persons the right to "make and enforce contracts," among other things, on an equal basis.

Bobbe's School and Fairfax-Brewster argued that sending a child to school is not the kind of contract which the act was intended to cover.

The court, however, said the law was just as applicable to the school situation as to real estate transactions, which it ruled in 1968 were covered by the post-Civil War law.

Both Fairfax-Brewster and Bobbe's said they did not discriminate on the basis of race.

Concern shown over bridge

WICKLIFFE, Ky. — Over 350 residents and interested people jammed the Ballard County Circuit Court room, here, Thursday night to voice their opinion concerning the closing for repairs of the Ohio River Bridge.

The public hearing was held by Kentucky Department of Highways First District officials to obtain technical information about use of the bridge and what times of day or seasons of the year would be most appropriate for closing down the bridge to make needed repairs.

Concern over the repair work on the bridge increased recently, when a section of the deck collapsed the night of May 21, causing the bridge to be closed four hours for temporary repairs, and then shut down again on May 25 and 26 for more permanent repairs.

These repairs, however, were only part of the work that is needed on the bridge, according to first district engineer, Bob Hodge, and a 1,500 foot section of deck on the Illinois side is to be replaced, with the entire bridge floor to be resurfaced.

A Ballard County Court official said most of the comment Thursday was directed toward keeping the structure open since its closing would create difficulties for commuters to Illinois and Missouri, farmers and industry.

Those voicing objection to the bridge closing indicated that it would require an additional 85-mile one-way drive to work across the river, a trip which nearly 400 from Wickliffe make daily. In addition, farmers assured the engineers that closing the bridge during grain hauling season, would cost area farmers over 50 cents a bushel for the additional distance.

The engineers explained several options to the residents, which included:

-Shutting down the bridge completely and letting the contractor work 24 hours a day. Hodges said this would take a minimum of four months.

-Keeping the bridge closed for repairs at all times, except for designated hours during the morning and afternoon. This he explained would make repairs last at least eight to 10 months.

-Allowing one lane to be open continuously during construction. This will mean 12 to 14 months for repairs.

-Working on the bridge in phases. Hodge estimated this would mean at least 18 to 20 months for repairs.

Explaining the latter, Hodge said that "phases" means that the bridge would be closed while the contractor completes work for a certain time period. This would be followed by a period of unrestricted traffic flow.

Ballard County officials said the decision of what option to take in making the bridge repairs now rests with the Kentucky Department of Highways in Frankfurt, Ky., but they had no idea when the decision would be made.

Hodges said funds are available for the work, but the cost would not run into the millions as reported in a Louisville newspaper. A contract for the work is scheduled to be let this fall, with work to begin by April, 1977.

Dexter woman stabbed, raped Thursday in home

DEXTER— Police this morning were investigating the stabbing and rape of a young woman Thursday night in her home, but released few details to the press.

The incident reportedly happened between 10-11 p.m. Thursday when the unidentified assailant made entry through a back window of the home.

The woman was able to make a statement to investigating officers following the attack, but her wounds were bad enough that she underwent surgery this morning in Dexter Memorial Hospital.

She was reportedly stabbed twice in the chest and was cut once on a wrist, apparently with a butcher or hunting knife.

She was reportedly stabbed first and then raped.

The woman was described in her early twenties, but her exact age was not given.

She described her assalilant as white, unmasked, about 5 feet 8 inches - 5 feet 10 inches tall; weight about 150-160 pounds; with an art tattoo on one arm and tattooed writing across the other; with light brown hair tied in a pony tail.

Gideon woman robbed in home

NEW MADRID— A rural Gideon woman, Mary Wanda Reynolds, was robbed of checks and cash totaling $1,326 and jewelry valued at $2,400 about 9:20 p.m. Thursday by two intruders who forced their way into her home and then bound and tied her with an electrical cord.

Mrs. Reynolds, who lives three miles east of Gideon on Highway 162, told investigating officers that two white males had knocked on her back door and called "Mary Wanda, let us in."

She said she turned on the back porch light and just as she opened the door the men shoved her back into the kitchen. She was told to lie face down on the floor and themen then tied her hands and feet.

One of the men stood watch over her while the other ransacked the house.

New Madrid County Deputy Sheriff Willis "Bo" Wingo said Mrs. Reynolds did not see or hear any car before or after the robbery nor did the men display any weapon.

One of the men wore a strocking over his face and had on a brown felt hat. Both were described as about 5 feet 10 inches tall.

Wingo said Mrs. Reynolds sustained some minor bruises and scratches when they shoved her into a kitchen corner.

Taken in the robbery were three checks that included a $640 federal income tax refund check, a $146 state income tax refund check, a Division of Family Services check from the state in the amount of $530 which was a salary check to Mrs. Reynolds, who is employed by the division, $10 or $11 in cash, one dinner ring valued at $1,500, one little finger ring valued at $500 and other assorted jewelry valued at $400.

The men had cut the telephone wires before leaving. However, Mrs. Raynolds was able to move around and free herself shortly after the men left. She drove to Gideon and notified the police.

An investigation is continuing by the sheriff's department.

2 hurt seriously in accidents

Two persons were seriously injured and four persons received minor injuries in two separate accidents between Thursday afternoon and this morning the highway patrol reported this today.

An accident involving three vehicles at 4:40 p.m. Thursday, two miles north of Malden on highway 25, resulted in serious injuries to Mary Madle, 18, of Kennett driver of a southbound car, and one of her passengers Ann Finley, 53, also of Kennett.

Two other passengers in the Madle car Addie Harris, 21, and brian Harris, 2, both of Malden received minor injuries.

The patrol said the accident occurred when a pickup truck driven north by Roy Lott, 21, of Bernie slowed for a vehicle wanting to make a left turn, a car behind him driven by Frank Sedlacek, 50, of Dexter was unable to stop, skidded across the center line and struck the Madle car in the left side and the right rear of his vehicle struck the Lott pickup. The impact caused the Madle car to run off the left side of the road and overturn.

Sedlacek, also received minor injuries and was taken to Dexter Memorial Hospital and all of the injured in the Madle, car were taken to Dunklin County Memorial Hospital in Kennett.

In a one- car accident at 2:25 a.m. today on Interstate 55, four miles south of Old Appleton in Cape Girardeau County Gregory Brown, 25, of Perryville, received minor injuries and was taken to the Perry County Hospital in Perryville.

The patrol said Brown, northbound, apparently fell asleep, causing his car to run off the road into a deep ditch.

Tool box taken

A tool box and tools valued at $50 were reported stolen from a truck belonging to Nanney Trucking Co. sometime Thursday, police said today.

The truck was parked at the company lot on Maude Street when the theft occurred.

Plans made for use of swine flu vaccine

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Plans have been made by state health officials to insure quick distribution of vaccine to fight the deadly swine influenza this fall to insure that innoculation of Missourians can be accomplished before the start of the normal flu season in December.

Both the Missouri State Highway Patrol and the Missouri National Guard have pledged their support if emergency efforts to disburse the vaccine are needed should it not be delivered to Missouri in September when expected.

"We're staying flexible," said James Donoho, director of the state Swine Flu Immunization Program, in outlining the plans for statewide immunization this fall on Thursday, but he added that he has no reason to believe the vaccine will not be available on time.

The nationwide effort to immunize the public against an expected outbreak this winter of the swine flu began earlier this year after the death of a soldier at Fort Dix, N. J., was attributed to the virus. Officials have called the immunization program "the biggest public health effort in American history."

Work has been underway for some months to develop a vaccine and federal officials said earlier this week that the vaccine for adults will be ready to begin innoculations after Sept. 6 but it would be late fall or early winter before the innoculations of persons under 24 years old can begin because of problems in developing a proper dosage.

Jail terms for crimes with weapons

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Letters were being sent to prosecuting attorneys around the state today advising them that they will now have a new tool to combat the alarming increase in violent crimes—mandatory prison terms.

Gov. Christopher S. Bond signed into law on Thursday a bill that will enable prosecutors to seek mandatory three-year prison sentences without the possibility of release against persons accused of crimes involving the use of a weapon. That penalty would have to be sought under an additional charge against the defendant.

"With the rising rate of violent crimes committed with dangerous and deadly weapons, criminals in our state should be served notice that if they commit crimes by threatening or bringing harm to individuals that they will serve an additional sentence without possibility of early release," Bond said.

Calling the bill the "most significant anti-crime bill" passed by the legislature this year, the governor said it "marks the beginning of a new stage in public safety." The legislation will become effective Aug. 13.

Michael Garrett, director of the state Dpeartment of Public Safety, said letters were being sent today to all prosecutors advising them of the new law and reminding them that they must employe it for it to become a real deterrent.

"It has to be used to be effective," Garrett said, adding that the law will still leave discretion with the prosecutor to use the additional charge "in a responsible fashion so it can be a deterrent to violent crime."

Opponents of the law have charged that it will only result in the overcrowding of the state's prison system, already beset by a burgeoning inmate population, and that similar laws in other states have done nothing to reduce violence.

But Bond, while acknowledging that the short-term effect may be a rise in prison populations, said he hoped mandatory sentencing provisions would evenutally deter crimes completely and result in little "long-range" increase in the number of prison inmates.

George Camp, deputy director of the Department of Social Services, said the impact of the sentencing provisions on the prison population will probably begin to be seen by the middle of next year.

While signing the mandatory sentencing measure, however, Bond took the opportunity to veto another anti-crime bill that would have set up a statewide program for using special identifying numbers on personal property making it easier to recover if stolen.

Bond said he rejected the bill because it also included provisions that could have subjected "innocent citizens" to criminal prosecution because they were in possession of marked property without the specific consent of the owner or the bill of sale.

As an alternative, Bond issued an executive order directing Garrett to begin a statewide campaign for voluntary participation in a so-called "operation Ident" program without threat of criminal sanctions. Such voluntary programs have already been started by a number of private and public agencies in the state.

Among other bills signed by the governor Thursday was one permitting state lawmakers who have served interrupted terms in the legislature to receive retirement credit for terms service before the interruption by only serving two years after the interruption. Prior-service credit can currently be earned only by serving four more years.

Another bill is intended to bring the state into compliance with federal standards for highway billboards, although some officials, including several in the state Highway Department, believe the bill will not meet federal requirements and a non-compliance penalty of $11 million in annual federal highway aid will be assessed.

But Chief Highway Engineer Robert Hunter has said if efforts are made to assess such a penalty, the state should fight them.

Other bills signed will:

—Increase from 40 to 60 cents the fee charged for vehicle licenses sold by Department of Revenue fee agents.

—Lower population requirements to petition for formation of free public libraries.

—Bring state law on industrial development bond issues into compliance with recent constitutional changes.

—Increase the maximum height for vehicle tail lights and reflectors.

—Permit transfer of state-owned armory property to Jackson County for use as a sheltered workshop.

—Rquire persons doing excavation work to contact owners of underground facilities to determine location of such facilities before work begins.

—Revise state land reclamation laws dealing with mining of tar sands.

—Revise state law dealing with return of fluids to subsurface formations.

—Permit podiatrists and chiropodists to perform some surgical procedures.

—Allow the Department of Transportation to receive federal subsidies on behalf of the state for rail preservation.

—Revise the state ad valorem tax on motor vehicles held by dealers to meet objections of the state Surpeme Court to the previous provisions.

—Permit drainage districts to cooperate with state and federal governments in construction of reclamation improvements.

DOWN THE TUBES

The familiar tubes used in radio and television receivers are falling victim to the solid-state revolution. RCA has announced that it will close its receiving tube plant at Harrison, N.J., July 30, leaving only two other American companies in this end of the electronics business.

Reason is the steadily decreasing demand for tubes in the face of the shift to solid-state devices. Industry-wide sales of tubes have declined from 442 million in 1966 to about 80 million in 1975. This is less than TCA alone sold in the heyday of the receiving tube.

On a nostalgic note, Radio-Electronic magazine recalls that the now obsolete plant in New Jersey was originally built by Thomas A. Edison in 1882 to produce light bulbs. It was the "Edison effect" discovered in early light bulbs that led Lee De Forest and other pioneers to develop the vacuum tubes which made possible the miracle of radio, and later, television.

FACE OF AMERICAN SPIRIT

One of the more successful Bicentennial activities, at least in terms of grass-roots interest, has been the search for "Great American Faces," launched last year by the Kinney Shoe Corp. and adopted as an official project by the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration.

Twelve outstanding faces, judged for qualities of "character, personality, strength, emotion, warmth and humanity," have been selected from more than 5,000 entries submitted by amateur photographers from all walks of life. The winners range in age from a five-month-old boy to a 90-year-old grandmother.

The shoe company says it undertook sponsorship of the photo quest to demonstrate America's "still vital spirit" and as a way of involving Americans in the Bicentennial rather than being merely spectators.

The "Great American Faces" will be on view at shopping centers around the country throughout the Bicentennial year, as well as at the National Visitors Center in Washington, D.C.

P.S. TO THE NEWS

DANGER FROM MEXICO
By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

"Don't worry, the Reds are still 90 miles away" was the sarcastic slogan of the 1960s designed to focus attention on the stupidity of our State Department, first, in supporting Fidel Castro's takeover of Cuba, second, in withdrawing air and sea support from the Cuban Freedom Fighters at the Bay of Pigs in 1961, and third, in refusing to enforce the Monroe Doctrine when the Soviets installed offensive nuclear missiles in Cuba in 1962.

Thirty congressmen, Republicans and Democrats, recently sent a letter to President Ford, which indicates that they believe that the Reds are no longer as far away as 90 miles, but are on the verge of taking control of Mexico. If that ever happens, the Communists will share a virtually unguarded border along 1,500 miles of Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California.

The letter that the 30 congressmen sent to the President pointed out the "long strides toward the imposition of a Communist regime" which have been taken by Mexican President Luis Echeverria, including "a broadfront attack upon private property in all forms," "officially tolerated land seizures," "compulsory textbook changes intended to indoctrinate young Mexicans with a Castroite propaganda," and a proposed amnesty which "would release hardened Communist cadres from prison and allow them to enter the government."

Under this amnesty, the Communists who would move from prison to government jobs would be those who engineered the so-called "student revolt" in Mexico City in 1968 resulting in the deaths of at least a thousand people.

President Echeverria has welcomed to Mexico the top Communist officials who fled from Chile after the suicide of President Salvador Allende. Echeverria is often seen on public platforms with Allende's widow, Hortensia, who now lives in Mexico.

Echeverria set up a "think tank" in Mexico for Chilean and other foreign Communists called the "Center of Economic Investigation and Teaching." Among the laws produced by this think tank is the new Law of Urban Reform, which the newspaper El Occidental of Guadalajara says was praised by Mrs. Allende as being "identical to one which her husband intended to impose in Chile."

Echeverria is often quoted in Communist publications, such as New Times, as pledging "solidarity with the people of Chile waging a struggle against fascism." "Fascism" is, of course, the Communist term for the present anti-Communist Chilean military government.

The letter to President Ford from the 30 congressmen states that "Mexico is in turmoil over these changes ... which are inspired by a large group of foreign Communists and Marxists who presently advise President Echeverria. They include such notorious Chileans as the former foreign minister, Clodomira Almeida; the former minister of economics, Pedro Vuskovic; and the head of the far-left Socialist Party, Carlos Altamirano."

The 30 concerned congressmen accurately point out that the establishment of a Castro-type or Allende-type Communist government in neighboring Mexico would pose "a tremendous danger to the United States." It is an open question whether or State Department is giving our President any more accurate information than it did before Castro took over Cuba, or before Castro's soldiers invaded Angola and Mozambique.

BICENTENNIAL NOTE: WILL FREEDOM DESTROY FREEDOM?

There was a crowd, a podium, and tears...It was the last day of his administration and he gave his final speech as President of the United States. Those who supported him wept publicly. As they listened to him speak, the newspaper that had villified him since he came to office was printing its final editorial regarding his administration:

"The man who is the source of all misfortunes of our country is this day reduced to a level with his fellow citizens, and is no longer possessed of power to multiply evils upon the United States...his name ceases from this day to give currency to political insults, and to legalize corruption.

"A new era is now opening upon us...When a retrospect has been taken of his administration, it is a subject of the greatest astonishment that a single individual should have cankered the principles of republicanism...and carried his designs against public liberty."

Any reader could be forgiven for assuming that the subject of the editorial was Richard Nixon. But the man concerned, also accused of financial irregularities, was none other than George Washington, the first President of the United States.

The quotes are from the prologue to a new book "The Gods of Antenna" by Bruce Herschensohn, published by Arlington House.

The book is a detailed and brilliant analysis of how American television brought about the defeat in Vietnam, the first in the history of the United States. The author invites the reader to imagine how World War II would have gone with television: "American bombers, innocent victims, Americans in Normandy; on Bataan; Americans everywhere on television every night."

Even Intelligence Digest of September 1971 commented: "Television plays a very large part in the Vietnam war...none of the leading politicians has so far shown the slightest sign of being aware of this very real and potent factor which, though still in embryo, will steadily grow and could become a determining factor in politics."

Following in the wake of the Vietnam defeat, the first in American history, the Soviet Union has set up an organization to study, for further exploitation, the impact of television upon an "open" society such as exists in the United States and most of its allies.

It is doubtful if any society can politically sustain a prolonged conflict which is so exposed to the electorate day in and day out. It was political considerations arising out of the over exposure of the Vietnam conflict which contributed to the hampering of the military effort, which in turn lowered morale and led to deception which was exposed to the discredit of the military lobby. The bottom line was a resounding victory for the Communists for which the rest of the free world will pay dearly in the years to come.

Is it just a coincidence that the greatest Marxist Advance has taken place with the massive spread of television and its instant popular politics?

Question: Will freedom destroy freedom?

FORD'D DISASTER
Burned alive in the Shrine

SIRENS WAILING, President Ford and Gov. Bond screeched into Springfield to battle the crackling political bonfire built by Ronald Reagan.

Ford and Bond were all but burned alive. They got out with their skins, and that was about all. When the Republican State Convention closed down on Saturday, Ford's frantic campaign for Show-Me votes was a smoking ruin.

All the king's horses and all the king's men...

To be very cold about the events that turned Springfield into the Republican Capital of the U.S. for a couple of days, Ford and Bond were incinerated because they didn't have the votes.

It came down to the 1440 delegates who sweltered through a June Saturday on the floor of the Shrine Mosque. Quietly, relentlessly, from county caucuses weeks ago on up to the Shrine, Reagan's field marshals in Missouri organized themselves into possession of a narrow, tough, fervid majority that wouldn't look twice at Air Force One...and was stone deaf to the wheedling and cajoling of the Republican establishment figures who lined up behind Ford.

Only a few months ago, the Show-Me State's 49 delegates to the GOP National Convention in Kansas City were widely conceded to Ford. The Reagan embers leaped into flame at congressional district caucuses several weeks ago: Ford took 15 delegates to KC, Reagan took 12, and three were uncommitted. In the Shrine, Reagan's True Believers took 18 of 19 delegate positions at stake. With grudging courtesy, the Reagan captains accepted their inability to stanch the trickle of votes that bled from from the Reagan slate to Bond, making him the 19th delegate by a mere four votes of more than 1400.

Thehumiliation was acute for Atty. Gen. John Danforth, making a difficult and probably last-chance run at the U.S. Senate, and Lt. Gov. William Phelps. Both ran as Ford delegates, and both lost to a Reagan slate headed by former U.S. Rep. Thomas Curtis and fleshed out with unknowns, political newcomers, local party workers, and Reagan organizers.

With the picking of Missouri's 49 national delegates finished, the score is: Reagan, 30; Ford, 16; uncommitted, three. Nationally, Ford's debacle in Springfield may cost him dearly. Although he held onto a slim lead over Reagan, the Missouri blitz gives Reagan a clear psychological edge heading into oncoming delegate battles in Iowa, Washington, Texas, Montana, New Mexico and Utah.

What in blazes happened? The Republican establishment in Missouri must be asking itself as it licks the Springfield wounds.

We have some thoughts on that score:

First, the President Ford Committee in Missouri seems to have fallen prey to its penchant for organizing things from the top down. Reagan's only big name in Missouri was Curtis. But Reagan didn't need the names, because he had the votes. Reagan's people organized from the bottom up, starting early and never relaxing. And they won.

Second, Ford's pitch when he came to Springfield was stunningly inept, if his aim was to swing enough votes to elect his slate at the Shrine. And if that wasn't his aim, why did he come to town? The President's impact was zero, or very near it.

Ford and Bond came to town, in company with party brass John Tower, Howard Baker, and Robert Dole, and by Ford campaign chief Rogers Morton, pushing the themes of peace, prosperity, and Ford as the Republican with a chance to win in November. It is hard to imagine a line of chatter that would mean less to the Reagan folk.

Peace? Reagan has all but said that Ford and Henry Kissinger are selling the country down the river to the Soviets. Looking through that sort of lens, can the Reaganites consider Ford very much better than "some Democrat?" Hardly. Prosperity? Nothing less than a frontal assault on the powers of the federal government is going to satisfy the Reaganites, and Gerald Ford, plainly, isn't taking that domestic line. The Ford-can-win theme? Carried along by a semi-religious zeal, winning is a secondary issue with most Reaganites. They think they WILL win, mind you; but when it comes right down to it, they would rather be right than President.

Third, Springfield's role as the first major post-primary testing of the two men (Illinois gave Ford five delegates over the weekend) leaves the clear impression that Ford's strategists, very early on, woefully underestimated the latent conservative intensity of the GOP. Do they remember nothing of the Goldwater Putsch of 1964?

Nationally, the verdict on Springfield seems to read that Gerald Ford came to Missouri in bad shape, and left in worse. Whether he can douse the other bonfires between here and Kansas City is anyone's guess.

REAGAN'S $90 BILLION POLITICAL LESSON

A month before the nation's first presidential primary in New Hampshire, Ronald Reagan has collided with the first law of politics:

Never depart from generalities. Above all, never make concrete proposals which, although they may appear reasonable and straightforward enough on the surface, require the kind of backing and filling Mr. Reagan has had to go through in defending his suggestion that some of the functions the federal government has assumed over the years be returned to the individual states.

In 1972, George McGovern was never able to shuck the image of irresponsibility and harebrainedness he created with his scheme to send every American a check for $1,000, even after he became his party's nominee and no longer had to contend with rival Democrats as well as the opposition.

It remains to be seen whether Reagan can overcome the similar handicap he has imposed upon himself so early in this election year. The media, gleefully abetted by the supporters of President Ford, has latched onto Reagan's "$90-billion plan" like a mutt that has sunk its teeth into a postman's ankle.

By contrast, nobody knows what any of the dozen or so announced Democratic candidates stands for or what course they would chart for the Republic as it begins its third century. Thus no one is yapping at their heels demanding explanations and justifications.

The voters, whether they admit it to themselves or not, are powerfully influenced by first impressions, and the impression left by Reagan in New Hampshire is that his $90-billion idea was broached with no more thought to its practicality or consequences than McGovern gave his $1,000 one.

Whether it was or not, Reagan since then has been forced to devote most of his energies to not altogether convincing elaboration of his proposal. The transfer of certain federal responsibilities to the states, chiefly those involving welfare, would be a gradual, not a sudden process, he says.

This is good. Men who offer themselves as leaders of the nation should not be allowed to get away with vague generlities.

Unfortunately, American politics doesn't work that way. For all their complaining about Tweedledum and Tweedledee, voters are always uneasy about any candidate who threatens to change the status quo too profoundly, however unsatisfactory that status quo may be, or who asks them to peer too deeply into the unknown future.

Fitz's Challenge Taken: Federal Government under new laws could wipe out teamsters chiefs' pensions, salaries

WASHINGTON— Usually a cautious man, eschewing his old bus-driver-caught-in-rush-hour-traffic earthiness when conversing with outsiders, Teamsters' chief Frank (Fitz) Fitzsimmons let euphoria get the best of him at his Las Vegas convention and rushed in where even his angels fear to tread.

By telling all critics to go to hell and permitting the White House to send its top Labor Department officials to woo him in pre-election buddy talk, Fitz gave the investigation-oriented Senate the chance it has been seeking to probe "the hell" out of his besieged 2.3 million-member (40,000 contracts) brotherhood. The searching will crackle through two or three years of hearings. It will begin shortly, with U.S. Secretary of Labor Bill Usery and his pension protection chief James Hutchinson, administrator of the pension and welfare benefit programs, on a Senate witness stand.

Shortly after the silver-haired Usery told the Teamsters' recent convention that "I belong to this club because I believe in it," and that the teamsters' chiefs are doing a fighting, bang-up, "professional" job representing their following, he got a phone call from as Senate Labor Committee staff investigator.

Committee chairman Sen. Harrison (Pete) Williams wanted to see him early Friday morning (June 18). Positively.

That morning for 45 minutes in the Senate committee office Usery was told in no uncertain terms that it was stupid to have gone to the Teamsters' convention and to have joined "the club."

And how is his interdepartmental Labor-Justice Committee investigation progressing anyway?

"Certainly, as a practical matter, you had a lot of publicity," Pete Williams is quoted as telling Usery. "Cartoons showing you embracing Fitz. How do you restore confidence in your probe when you called yourself a member of the Teamsters' club?"

And, added a high committee official: "They were all pleasant guys in that Friday meeting, and it's hard to be nasty to Usery. But he got the message. He did a dumb thing and he got sandbagged."

So the Senate Labor Committee hearings are a direct result of Usery's convention appearance. He will lead off the witnesses shortly, I'm told. Others of his staff will follow.

This is merely the beginning. Crowds of reporters, clustered TV cameras. The whole thing. Fitz will be summoned after a while. Meantime, he and some six or eight of his top colleagues have been subpoenaed by the Labor Department itself. Within a year the budget on these probes will roll into the millions of dollars.

It's what the Teamsters' leaders appeared to have demanded. All critics were lumped into one phalanx and told to "go t o hell." Well, there could have been no other reaction from all probers (about five basic teams). Especially from the federal investigators on the civil front. The Labor Department inquiry – separate from the public hearings – could cost many teamsters their jogs, their pensions, their fortunes.

The public, condition-reflexed to gangbusters reports on some teamster leaders and still titillated by Jimmy Hoffa's disappearance (unrelated to any of these probes), isn't quite aware of the impact the hearings and investigations could have on the giant union's leadership. For the moment, the auditing and analysis are chiefly on a civil basis.

The full scope of federal penalties under several laws including the Employe Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) have actually not been explored in depth. First, no actual witnesses, except the Labor-Management Services Administration auditors and investigators, are needed. This is a bookkeeping operation. Then, if a failure of judicious fiduciary investment of hundreds of millions of dollars drawn from the Central States Southeast and Southwestern Areas !1.3 billion pension fund is proven, the following could result:

There could be a series of government suits for recovery of moneys injudiciously lent or invested since Jan. 1, 1975, to shaky or suspicious corporations.

There could be a demand on the trustees for restitution -- with interest or a surcharge "to make the fund whole for losses."

If eventual Labor Department charges of injudicious lending to gambling casinos, real estate developments and other suspect projects are made and proven, they could be the basis of class action suits by thousands of rank and filers now organized by rebel groups such as PROD. There are "many civil punishments possible," a high Justice Department official says.

Once the federal government, via the Senate or the Labor Department, proves injudicious action by the fund's trustees or as the result of pressure upon them by union officials, a pattern would be established. From this the Justice Department hopes to proe conflict of interest. And one top aide to U.S. Atty. Gen. Levi says he will attempt to show that some were involved in a "pattern of racketeering."

If proven under the comparatively new federal law title 18, Sec. 1962-1964, teamsters' chiefs could lose their right to lead unions, their right to any activity inside labor and their rights to their salaries, their residual vesting and their pensions.

The 1958 McClelllan Senate probe was a one-tent show compared to the five-ring action waiting in the wings.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

The Edge of War

By Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Armies and navies, some of them armed with hydrogen-headed missiles, are poised on the edge of war in the Middle East, on the African continent and along the Russian-Chinese border.

We have studied intelligence reports and interviewed top defense officials to determine the prospects for war or peace. Here is our assessment:

— MIDDLE EAST: Senior military officials describe the Middle East as a "boiling cauldron" and a "witches' brew" where "anything can happen." They also fear, in the words of one high official, that the situation "will get worse before it gets better."

Part of the problem is that the orthodox power struggles -- Arab vs. Jew, Christian vs. Moslem, pro-Soviet vs. pro-American -- have become blurred by the politics of chaos.

The most explosive spot, of course, is Lebanon which is in the grip of anarchy. Intelligence reports indicate the situation is "out of control" of anyone, including the Syrian forces on the scene.

— AFRICA: Despite the Soviet-Cuban success in Angola, U.S. strategists regard the triumph as a "very short-term gain." The appearance of Soviet-backed Cuban forces in Angola, according to a Pentagon assessment, has upset such African nations as Tanzania, Uganda, Zaire and Zambia.

These young nations were far from pro-American, but the Soviet-Cuban incursion on the African continent has helped to break down age-old antagonisms and to unite these nations against the Communist threat.

There has also been a beneficial effect for the United States in South America. The intervention of a Cuban expeditionary force in faraway Angola "has scared the pants off" Fidel Castro's Latin American neighbors, said one Pentagon strategist.

Latin American nations are painfully aware that, if Castro's troops can fight on the African continent, they could more easily move against any nation in South America. Many Latins fear Castro "is practicing" in Africa for adventures in South America, according to Pentagon planners.

The result has been to make South American governments more dependent upon the United States for protection. This was a subject that Secretary of State Henry Kissinger discussed with Latin leaders on his recent South American tour, say our sources.

— ASIA: Intelligence reports claim that the Soviets now have approximately 25 per cent of their available combat ground and tactical forces dug in along the cold, barren Russian-Chinese border.

This has caused concern in the Pentagon whose military strategists still consider Russia, not China, to be the greater threat to the United States.

Watch on Waste: The Social Security Administration, whose dwindling trust funds are already threatened with bankruptcy, plans to construct a $69 million computer center that isn't needed.

Confidential audits, now in our possession, show that Social Security already has installed advanced computer systems "far in excess of its needs."

According to a recent investigation conducted by the General Accounting Office, the agency's present computers are easily capable of supporting more than twice the current workload.

The government auditors discovered, to their astonishment, that even on the busiest days the computers were utilized an average of 25 per cent below capacity.

Yet in spite of these findings, Social Security is going ahead with plans to expand its computer system. The proposed $69 million computer center is only part of the money the agency wants to siphon from its trust funds.

Already, it is constructing a $2.3 million addition to its present computer facilities. Four huge computers will also be installed in November at a cost of $25 million.

To top it all, the agency would like to overhaul its computer operations at an estimated grand cost of $400 million to $500 million.

The GAO auditors found problems at the agency's data processing center, all right, but concluded these were organizational and personnel problems.

"We do not believe that the way to solve these problems is to add more equipment," declared the GAO report. "On the contrary, reduction of the number of systems could help to ease the management problem."

Social Security contends that its existing facilities are out-of-date, that a complete "top to bottom" overhaul is necessary to continue uninterrupted delivery of Social Security checks, that the GAO conclusions are based on an inadequate survey and that a Boeing Co. study shows that the GAO findings hinge on inconclusive data.

Footnote: Rep. Charles Vanick, D.-Ohio, chairman of the powerful House Ways and Means oversight subcommittee, has written the Social Security commissioner a fiery letter calling upon him to "immediately suspend" the expansion of the computer facilities. Our congressional sources say hearings probably will be held to back up Vanick's demand.

BICENTENNIAL NOTE: WILL FREEDOM DESTROY FREEDOM?

There was a crowd, a podium, and tears...It was the last day of his administration and he gave his final speech as President of the United States. Those who supported him wept publicly. As they listened to him speak, the newspaper that had villified him since he came to office was printing its final editorial regarding his administration:

"The man who is the source of all misfortunes of our country is this day reduced to a level with his fellow citizens, and is no longer possessed of power to multiply evils upon the United States...his name ceases from this day to give currency to political insults, and to legalize corruption.

"A new era is now opening upon us...When a retrospect has been taken of his administration, it is a subject of the greatest astonishment that a single individual should have cankered the principles of republicanism...and carried his designs against public liberty."

Any reader could be forgiven for assuming that the subject of the editorial was Richard Nixon. But the man concerned, also accused of financial irregularities, was none other than George Washington, the first President of the United States.

The quotes are from the prologue to a new book "The Gods of Antenna" by Bruce Herschensohn, published by Arlington House.

The book is a detailed and brilliant analysis of how American television brought about the defeat in Vietnam, the first in the history of the United States. The author invites the reader to imagine how World War II would have gone with television: "American bombers, innocent victims, Americans in Normandy; on Bataan; Americans everywhere on television every night."

Even Intelligence Digest of September 1971 commented: "Television plays a very large part in the Vietnam war...none of the leading politicians has so far shown the slightest sign of being aware of this very real and potent factor which, though still in embryo, will steadily grow and could become a determining factor in politics."

Following in the wake of the Vietnnam defeat, the first in American history, the Soviet Union has set up an organization to study, for further exploitation, the impact of television upon an "open" society such as exists in the United States and most of its allies.

It is doubtful if any society can politically sustain a prolonged conflict which is so exposed to the electorate day in and day out. It was political considerations arising out of the over exposure of the Vietnam conflict which contributed to the hampering of the military effort, which in turn lowered morale and led to deception which was exposed to the discredit of the military lobby. The bottom line was a resounding victory for the Communists for which the rest of the free world will pay dearly in the years to come.

Is it just a coincidence that the greatest Marxist Advance has taken place with the massive spread of television and its instant popular politics?

Question: Will freedom destroy freedom?

FORD'D DISASTER
Burned alive in the Shrine

SIRENS WAILING, President Ford and Gov. Bond screeched into Springfield to battle the crackling political bonfire built by Ronald Reagan.

Ford and Bond were all but burned alive. They got out with their skins, and that was about all. When the Republican State Convention closed down on Saturday, Ford's frantic campaign for Show-Me votes was a smoking ruin.

All the king's horses and all the king's men...

To be very cold about the events that turned Springfield into the Republican Capital of the U.S. for a couple of days, Ford and Bond were incinerated because they didn't have the votes.

It came down to the 1440 delegates who sweltered through a June Saturday on the floor of the Shrine Mosque. Quietly, relentlessly, from county caucuses weeks ago on up to the Shrine, Reagan's field marshals in Missouri organized themselves into possession of a narrow, tough, fervid majority that wouldn't look twice at Air Force One...and was stone deaf to the wheedling and cajoling of the Republican establishment figures who lined up behind Ford.

Only a few months ago, the Show-Me State's 49 delegates to the GOP National Convention in Kansas City were widely conceded to Ford. The Reagan embers leaped into flame at congressional district caucuses several weeks ago: Ford took 15 delegates to KC, Reagan took 12, and three were uncommitted. In the Shrine, Reagan's True Believers took 18 of 19 delegate positions at stake. With grudging courtesy, the Reagan captains accepted their inability to stanch the trickle of votes that bled from from the Reagan slate to Bond, making him the 19th delegate by a mere four votes of more than 1400.

Thehumiliation was acute for Atty. Gen. John Danforth, making a difficult and probably last-chance run at the U.S. Senate, and Lt. Gov. William Phelps. Both ran as Ford delegates, and both lost to a Reagan slate headed by former U.S. Rep. Thomas Curtis and fleshed out with unknowns, political newcomers, local party workers, and Reagan organizers.

With the picking of Missouri's 49 national delegates finished, the score is: Reagan, 30; Ford, 16; uncommitted, three. Nationally, Ford's debacle in Springfield may cost him dearly. Although he held onto a slim lead over Reagan, the Missouri blitz gives Reagan a clear psychological edge heading into oncoming delegate battles in Iowa, Washington, Texas, Montana, New Mexico and Utah.

What in blazes happened? The Republican establishment in Missouri must be asking itself as it licks the Springfield wounds.

We have some thoughts on that score:

First, the President Ford Committee in Missouri seems to have fallen prey to its penchant for organizing things from the top down. Reagan's only big name in Missouri was Curtis. But Reagan didn't need the names, because he had the votes. Reagan's people organized from the bottom up, starting early and never relaxing. And they won.

Second, Ford's pitch when he came to Springfield was stunningly inept, if his aim was to swing enough votes to elect his slate at the Shrine. And if that wasn't his aim, why did he come to town? The President's impact was zero, or very near it.

Ford and Bond came to town, in company with party brass John Tower, Howard Baker, and Robert Dole, and by Ford campaign chief Rogers Morton, pushing the themes of peace, prosperity, and Ford as the Republican with a chance to win in November. It is hard to imagine a line of chatter that would mean less to the Reagan folk.

Peace? Reagan has all but said that Ford and Henry Kissinger are selling the country down the river to the Soviets. Looking through that sort of lens, can the Reaganites consider Ford very much better than "some Democrat?" Hardly. Prosperity? Nothing less than a frontal assault on the powers of the federal government is going to satisfy the Reaganites, and Gerald Ford, plainly, isn't taking that domestic line. The Ford-can-win theme? Carried along by a semi-religious zeal, winning is a secondary issue with most Reaganites. They think they WILL win, mind you; but when it comes right down to it, they would rather be right than President.

Third, Springfield's role as the first major post-primary testing of the two men (Illinois gave Ford five delegates over the weekend) leaves the clear impression that Ford's strategists, very early on, woefully underestimated the latent conservative intensity of the GOP. Do they remember nothing of the Goldwater Putsch of 1964?

Nationally, the verdict on Springfield seems to read that Gerald Ford came to Missouri in bad shape, and left in worse. Whether he can douse the other bonfires between here and Kansas City is anyone's guess.

REAGAN'S $90 BILLION POLITICAL LESSON

A month before the nation's first presidential primary in New Hampshire, Ronald Reagan has collided with the first law of politics:

Never depart from generalities. Above all, never make concrete proposals which, although they may appear reasonable and straightforward enough on the surface, require the kind of backing and filling Mr. Reagan has had to go through in defending his suggestion that some of the functions the federal government has assumed over the years be returned to the individual states.

In 1972, George McGovern was never able to shuck the image of irresponsibility and harebrainedness he created with his scheme to send every American a check for $1,000, even after he became his party's nominee and no longer had to contend with rival Democrats as well as the opposition.

It remains to be seen whether Reagan can overcome the similar handicap he has imposed upon himself so early in this election year. The media, gleefully abetted by the supporters of President Ford, has latched onto Reagan's "$90-billion plan" like a mutt that has sunk its teeth into a postman's ankle.

By contrast, nobody knows what any of the dozen or so announced Democratic candidates stands for or what course they would chart for the Republic as it begins its third century. Thus no one is yapping at their heels demanding explanations and justifications.

The voters, whether they admit it to themselves or not, are powerfully influenced by first impressions, and the impression left by Reagan in New Hampshire is that his $90-billion idea was broached with no more thought to its practicality or consequences than McGovern gave his $1,000 one.

Whether it was or not, Reagan since then has been forced to devote most of his energies to not altogether convincing elaboration of his proposal. The transfer of certain federal responsibilities to the states, chiefly those involving welfare, would be a gradual, not a sudden process, he says.

This is good. Men who offer themselves as leaders of the nation should not be allowed to get away with vague generlities.

Unfortunately, American politics doesn't work that way. For all their complaining about Tweedledum and Tweedledee, voters are always uneasy about any candidate who threatens to change the status quo too profoundly, however unsatisfactory that status quo may be, or who asks them to peer too deeply into the unknown future.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Fitz's Challenge Taken:

Federal Government under new laws could wipe out teamsters chiefs' pensions, salaries

WASHINGTON— Usually a cautious man, eschewing his old bus-driver-caught-in-rush-hour-traffic earthiness when conversing with outsiders, Teamsters' chief Frank (Fitz) Fitzsimmons let euphoria get the best of him at his Las Vegas convention and rushed in where even his angels fear to tread.

By telling all critics to go to hell and permitting the White House to send its top Labor Department officials to woo him in pre-election buddy talk, Fitz gave the investigation-oriented Senate the chance it has been seeking to probe "the hell" out of his besieged 2.3 million-member (40,000 contracts) brotherhood. The searching will crackle through two or three years of hearings. It will begin shortly, with U.S. Secretary of Labor Bill Usery and his pension protection chief James Hutchinson, administrator of the pension and welfare benefit programs, on a Senate witness stand.

Shortly after the silver-haired Usery told the Teamsters' recent convention that "I belong to this club because I believe in in it," and that the teamsters' chiefs are doing a fighting, bang-up, "professional" job representing their following, he got a phone call from as Senate Labor Committee staff investigator.

Committee chairman Sen. Harrison (Pete) Williams wanted to see him early Friday morning (June 18). Positively.

That morning for 45 minutes in the Senate committee office Usery was told in no uncertain terms that it was stupid to have gone to the Teamsters' convention and to have joined "the club."

And how is his interdepartmental Labor-Justice Committee investigation progressing anyway?

"Certainly, as a practical matter, you had a lot of publicity," Pete Williams is quoted as telling Usery. "Cartoons showing you embracing Fitz. How do you restore confidence in your probe when you called yourself a member of the Teamsters' club?"

And, added a high committee official: "They were all pleasant guys in that Friday meeting, and it's hard to be nasty to Usery. But he got the message. He did a dumb thing and he got sandbagged."

So the Senate Labor Committee hearings are a direct result of Usery's convention appearance. He will lead off the witnesses shortly, I'm told. Others of his staff will follow.

This is merely the beginning. Crowds of reporters, clustered TV cameras. The whole thing. Fitz will be summoned after a while. Meantime, he and some six or eight of his top colleagues have been subpoenaed by the Labor Department itself. Within a year the budget on these probes will roll into the millions of dollars.

It's what the Teamsters' leaders appeared to have demanded. All critics were lumped into one phalanx and told to "go to hell." Well, there could have been no other reaction from all probers (about five basic teams). Especially from the federal investigators on the civil front. The Labor Department inquiry – separate from the public hearings – could cost many teamsters their jogs, their pensions, their fortunes.

The public, condition-reflexed to gangbusters reports on some teamster leaders and still titillated by Jimmy Hoffa's disappearance (unrelated to any of these probes), isn't quite aware of the impact the hearings and investigations could have on the giant union's leadership. For the moment, the auditing and analysis are chiefly on a civil basis.

The full scope of federal penalties under several laws including the Employe Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) have actually not been explored in depth. First, no actual witnesses, except the Labor-Management Services Administration auditors and investigators, are needed. This is a bookkeeping operation. Then, if a failure of judicious fiduciary investment of hundreds of millions of dollars drawn from the Central States Southeast and Southwestern Areas !1.3 billion pension fund is proven, the following could result:

There could be a series of government suits for recovery of moneys injudiciously lent or invested since Jan. 1, 1975, to shaky or suspicious corporations.

There could be a demand on the trustees for restitution -- with interest or a surcharge "to make the fund whole for losses."

If eventual Labor Department charges of injudicious lending to gambling casinos, real estate developments and other suspect projects are made and proven, they could be the basis of class action suits by thousands of rank and filers now organized by rebel groups such as PROD. There are "many civil punishments possible," a high Justice Department official says.

Once the federal government, via the Senate or the Labor Department, proves injudicious action by the fund's trustees or as the result of pressure upon them by union officials, a pattern would be established. From this the Justice Department hopes to proe conflict of interest. And one top aide to U.S. Atty. Gen. Levi says he will attempt to show that some were involved in a "pattern of racketeering."

If proven under the comparatively new federal law title 18, Sec. 1962-1964, teamsters' chiefs could lose their right to lead unions, their right to any activity inside labor and their rights to their salaries, their residual vesting and their pensions.

The 1958 McClellan Senate probe was a one-tent show compared to the five-ring action waiting in the wings.

P.S. TO THE NEWS

DANGER FROM MEXICO
By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

"Don't worry, the Reds are still 90 miles away" was the sarcastic slogan of the 1960s designed to focus attention on the stupidity of our State Department, first, in supporting Fidel Castro's takeover of Cuba, second, in withdrawing air and sea support from the Cuban Freedom Fighters at the Bay of Pigs in 1961, and third, in refusing to enforce the Monroe Doctrine when the Soviets installed offensive nuclear missiles in Cuba in 1962.

Thirty congressmen, Republicans and Democrats, recently sent a letter to President Ford, which indicates that they believe that the Reds are no longer as far away as 90 miles, but are on the verge of taking control of Mexico. If that ever happens, the Communists will share a virtually unguarded border along 1,500 miles of Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California.

The letter that the 30 congressmen sent to the President pointed out the "long strides toward the imposition of a Communist regime" which have been taken by Mexican President Luis Echeverria, including "a broadfront attack upon private property in all forms," "officially tolerated land seizures," "compulsory textbook changes intended to indoctrinate young Mexicans with a Castroite propaganda," and a proposed amnesty which "would release hardened Communist cadres from prison and allow them to enter the government."

Under this amnesty, the Communists who would move from prison to government jobs would be those who engineered the so-called "student revolt" in Mexico City in 1968 resulting in the deaths of at least a thousand people.

President Echeverria has welcomed to Mexico the top Communist officials who fled from Chile after the suicide of President Salvador Allende. Echeverria is often seen on public platforms with Allende's widow, Hortensia, who now lives in Mexico.

Echeverria set up a "think tank" in Mexico for Chilean and other foreign Communists called the "Center of Economic Investigation and Teaching." Among the laws produced by this think tank is the new Law of Urban Reform, which the newspaper El Occidental of Guadalajara says was praised by Mrs. Allende as being "identical to one which her husband intended to impose in Chile."

Echeverria is often quoted in Communist publications, such as New Times, as pledging "solidarity with the people of Chile waging a struggle against fascism." "Fascism" is, of course, the Communist term for the present anti-Communist Chilean military government.

The letter to President Ford from the 30 congressmen states that "Mexico is in turmoil over these changes ... which are inspired by a large group of foreign Communists and Marxists who presently advise President Echeverria. They include such notorious Chileans as the former foreign minister, Clodomira Almeida; the former minister of economics, Pedro Vuskovic; and the head of the far-left Socialist Party, Carlos Altamirano."

The 30 concerned congressmen accurately point out that the establishment of a Castro-type or Allende-type Communist government in neighboring Mexico would pose "a tremendous danger to the United States." It is an open question whether or State Department is giving our President any more accurate information than it did before Castro took over Cuba, or before Castro's soldiers invaded Angola and Mozambique.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

The Edge of War

By Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Armies and navies, some of them armed with hydrogen-headed missiles, are poised on the edge of war in the Middle East, on the African continent and along the Russian-Chinese border.

We have studied intelligence reports and interviewed top defense officials to determine the prospects for war or peace. Here is our assessment:

— MIDDLE EAST: Senior military officials describe the Middle East as a "boiling cauldron" and a "witches' brew" where "anything can happen." They also fear, in the words of one high official, that the situation "will get worse before it gets better."

Part of the problem is that the orthodox power struggles -- Arab vs. Jew, Christian vs. Moslem, pro-Soviet vs. pro-American -- have become blurred by the politics of chaos.

The most explosive spot, of course, is Lebanon which is in the grip of anarchy. Intelligence reports indicate the situation is "out of control" of anyone, including the Syrian forces on the scene.

— AFRICA: Despite the Soviet-Cuban success in Angola, U.S. strategists regard the triumph as a "very short-term gain." The appearance of Soviet-backed Cuban forces in Angola, according to a Pentagon assessment, has upset such African nations as Tanzania, Uganda, Zaire and Zambia.

These young nations were far from pro-American, but the Soviet-Cuban incursion on the African continent has helped to break down age-old antagonisms and to unite these nations against the Communist threat.

There has also been a beneficial effect for the United States in South America. The intervention of a Cuban expeditionary force in faraway Angola "has scared the pants off" Fidel Castro's Latin American neighbors, said one Pentagon strategist.

Latin American nations are painfully aware that, if Castro's troops can fight on the African continent, they could more easily move against any nation in South America. Many Latins fear Castro "is practicing" in Africa for adventures in South America, according to Pentagon planners.

The result has been to make South American governments more dependent upon the United States for protection. This was a subject that Secretary of State Henry Kissinger discussed with Latin leaders on his recent South American tour, say our sources.

— ASIA: Intelligence reports claim that the Soviets now have approximately 25 per cent of their available combat ground and tactical forces dug in along the cold, barren Russian-Chinese border.

This has caused concern in the Pentagon whose military strategists still consider Russia, not China, to be the greater threat to the United States.

Watch on Waste: The Social Security Administration, whose dwindling trust funds are already threatened with bankruptcy, plans to construct a $69 million computer center that isn't needed.

Confidential audits, now in our possession, show that Social Security already has installed advanced computer systems "far in excess of its needs."

According to a recent investigation conducted by the General Accounting Office, the agency's present computers are easily capable of supporting more than twice the current workload.

The government auditors discovered, to their astonishment, that even on the busiest days the computers were utilized an average of 25 per cent below capacity.

Yet in spite of these findings, Social Security is going ahead with plans to expand its computer system. The proposed $69 million computer center is only part of the money the agency wants to siphon from its trust funds.

Already, it is constructing a $2.3 million addition to its present computer facilities. Four huge computers will also be installed in November at a cost of $25 million.

To top it all, the agency would like to overhaul its computer operations at an estimated grand cost of $400 million to $500 million.

The GAO auditors found problems at the agency's data processing center, all right, but concluded these were organizational and personnel problems.

"We do not believe that the way to solve these problems is to add more equipment," declared the GAO report. "On the contrary, reduction of the number of systems could help to ease the management problem."

Social Security contends that its existing facilities are out-of-date, that a complete "top to bottom" overhaul is necessary to continue uninterrupted delivery of Social Security checks, that the GAO conclusions are based on an inadequate survey and that a Boeing Co. study shows that the GAO findings hinge on inconclusive data.

Footnote: Rep. Charles Vanick, D.-Ohio, chairman of the powerful House Ways and Means oversight subcommittee, has written the Social Security commissioner a fiery letter calling upon him to "immediately suspend" the expansion of the computer facilities. Our congressional sources say hearings probably will be held to back up Vanick's demand.

Ann Landers

Divorced mom has psyche problem too

Dear Ann Landers: This is an open letter to my children who will, I'm sure, recognize themselves without my initials or the name of the city from which it comes.

Dear Children: I've had it with your pointed remarks about growing up in a "split" home. After several years of trying (without success) to convince your father that his children needed his love and attention (to say nothing of his financial support) there was nothing for me to do but leave him and go to work myself.

Now, after 20 years, I resent the references to your emnotional "hangups" and the "bruises" inflicted on your psyches because you grew up with no man in the house.

Would you rather I had stayed with your non-loving, non-working non-dad, in spite of the fact that he also "non-loved" me? Would you have been happier with a selfish, lazy, indifferent father than no father at all? I admit I made a big mistake and I am sorry. I married the wrong boy because I was too young and inexperienced to know he would never be a man.

Please let up on me with your complaints about your "damaged psyches." Bear in mind that my psyche has taken a bit of a beating, too. -- Your Loving Mother

Dear Mother: Your name is legion, lady. I applaud your courage for speaking out in behalf of all mothers who share the problem.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a problem that I hope you can help me with. To tell the truth, I'm ashamed to go to anyone who knows me. I'm a male, age 27, married to a pretty (but stubborn) girl. We have no children.

My grandmother lives about 100 miles away. She is a widow. Grandma was awfully good to us kids when we were growing up. I really love her a lot. She will be celebrating her 75th birthday in a few weeks. I want to drive over, spend the day with her and then take her out to the best restaurant in town.

My wife says she hasn't anything against my grandmother, but she can't stand old people. When I ask why, she doesn't know -- just says, "Everyone has a pet hate and this is mine."

What should I do about it, Ann? -- Muddled And In The Middle

Dera Mid: So your wife hates old people? What does she think will happen to her? Does she plan to shoot herself when she reaches 60:

Tell that mixed-up lady to find something to do on your grandmother's 75th birthday because you plan to be out of town. (P.S. Bring Grandma a white orchid corsage. She'll love it.)

Dear Ann: I am a teenage girl who is five-nine and a half. I once read in the paper about a girl who had an operation to cut down the bones in her legs to make her four inches shorter. Do you know the name of the doctor who performed that operation and the city he lives in? Thanks a lot for your help.--Heading For Giraffe-hood

Dear Friend: I could give you the information, but I won't. The operation is a compolicated one -- and somewhat risky. I would never recommend such surgery to a reader, much less be a party to it.

Learn to walk in a regal manner, young lady. Hold your head high. Be proud of your height. It can be a genuine asset instead of a handicap, if you view it as such.

Even if drinking is the "in" thing in your crowd, it needn't crowd you out. Learn the facts from Ann Landers's booklet, "Booze and You -- For Teenagers Only." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

'Sticks and stones...'

Put your pots and pans away, get out a chocolate bar and a cup of coffee and prepare to curl up each Wednesday with Cherie Blanton's new Cooking Up column.

The next 24 columns will be a serialization of a modern-day Gothic, complete with middle-aged heroines and haunted houses.

So get ready and don't miss the first chapter of "Sticks and Stones May Break Your Bones," starting Wednesday, July 7. It's sure to keep you guessing right up to the very last installment.

Joy of Stitching

by ELSA WILLIAMS

NEW LIGHT ON LAMPS

I have a lamp base that gets a lot of compliments. People are always exclaiming, "An embroidered lamp — how unusual!" And then they want to know how I thought of it and how I did it.

Well, I thought of it because it was so difficult to find a base that was exactly what I wanted. I happened to have an old lamp base in a simple cylindrical shape exactly the right size and proportions but the wrong color and so I thought, why not slipcover it in needlepoint? Now my old lamp base, perfectly coordinated to my color scheme, has a new lease on life.

It's really very easy to work embroidery on canvas into a lamp base using either a round, square or hexagonal block of wood under the needlepoint. The base can be left unfinished with felt glued to the bottom or mounted on a thin, slightly larger piece of wood.

Nowadays there's another option — a clear plastic base with the embroidery inserted inside. I happen to prefer my needlepoint on the outside because the beauty of the embroidery and the nuances of color and texture are more visible.

Bargello is an excellent choice for lamp embroidery. Almost any design that appeals to you can be adapted for this purpose. You may want to consider a series of banded horizontal patterns or a sequence of shaded and vertical stripes in colors that complement your room. Or, if your lamp base is cylindrical, you might use a single dramatic motif such as a stylized seashell or an abstract swirl of color to curve around it.

Careful measurements are essential in a project such as this. When you plan the size of the finished embroidery remember you'll need an embroidered border for turn-over beyond that.

Dear Elsa,

I'm having a great deal of trouble getting a four-way Bargello pattern to come out evenly. I've counted threads until my eyes blurred but my design is "off" by one or two threads at the corner. Would it be easier if I worked from the center or in from the edge of the design?

M.J. O'N

Dear M.J. O'N,

Whether you work from the outer or inner edge of your design, one absolute MUST in a four-way design is to baste your carefully mitered lines in plain sewing thread before working the design. You really can't go wrong working this way as there are four check points on each row of stitching to show you just where to miter. The mitering lines are as much an essential for the expert as for the novice.

Ann Landers

Divorced mom has psyche problem too

Dear Ann Landers: This is an open letter to my children who will, I'm sure, recognize themselves without my initials or the name of the city from which it comes.

Dear Children: I've had it with your pointed remarks about growing up in a "split" home. After several years of trying (without success) to convince your father that his children needed his love and attention (to say nothing of his financial support) there was nothing for me to do but leave him and go to work myself.

Now, after 20 years, I resent the references to your emnotional "hangups" and the "bruises" inflicted on your psyches because you grew up with no man in the house.

Would you rather I had stayed with your non-loving, non-working non-dad, in spite of the fact that he also "non-loved" me? Would you have been happier with a selfish, lazy, indifferent father than no father at all? I admit I made a big mistake and I am sorry. I married the wrong boy because I was too young and inexperienced to know he would never be a man.

Please let up on me with your complaints about your "damaged psyches." Bear in mind that my psyche has taken a bit of a beating, too. -- Your Loving Mother

Dear Mother: Your name is legion, lady. I applaud your courage for speaking out in behalf of all mothers who share the problem.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a problem that I hope you can help me with. To tell the truth, I'm ashamed to go to anyone who knows me. I'm a male, age 27, married to a pretty (but stubborn) girl. We have no children.

My grandmother lives about 100 miles away. She is a widow. Grandma was awfully good to us kids when we were growing up. I really love her a lot. She will be celebrating her 75th birthday in a few weeks. I want to drive over, spend the day with her and then take her out to the best restaurant in town.

My wife says she hasn't anything against my grandmother, but she can't stand old people. When I ask why, she doesn't know -- just says, "Everyone has a pet hate and this is mine."

What should I do about it, Ann? - Muddled And In The Middle

Dera Mid: So your wife hates old people? What does she think will happen to her? Does she plan to shoot herself when she reaches 60:

Tell that mixed-up lady to find something to do on your grandmother's 75th birthday because you plan to be out of town. (P.S. Bring Grandma a white orchid corsage. She'll love it.)

Dear Ann: I am a teenage girl who is five-nine and a half. I once read in the paper about a girl who had an operation to cut down the bones in her legs to make her four inches shorter. Do you know the name of the doctor who performed that operation and the city he lives in? Thanks a lot for your help.-- Heading For Giraffe-hood

Dear Friend: I could give you the information, but I won't. The operation is a compolicated one -- and somewhat risky. I would never recommend such surgery to a reader, much less be a party to it.

Learn to walk in a regal manner, young lady. Hold your head high. Be proud of your height. It can be a genuine asset instead of a handicap, if you view it as such.

Even if drinking is the "in" thing in your crowd, it needn't crowd you out. Learn the facts from Ann Landers's booklet, "Booze and You -- For Teenagers Only." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Joy of Stitching

NEW LIGHT ON LAMPS

I have a lamp base that gets a lot of compliments. People are always exclaiming, "An embroidered lamp — how unusual!" And then they want to know how I thought of it and how I did it.

Well, I thought of it because it was so difficult to find a base that was exactly what I wanted. I happened to have an old lamp base in a simple cylindrical shape exactly the right size and proportions but the wrong color and so I thought, why not slipcover it in needlepoint? Now my old lamp base, perfectly coordinated to my color scheme, has a new lease on life.

It's really very easy to work embroidery on canvas into a lamp base using either a round, square or hexagonal block of wood under the needlepoint. The base can be left unfinished with felt glued to the bottom or mounted on a thin, slightly larger piece of wood.

Nowadays there's another option — a clear plastic base with the embroidery inserted inside. I happen to prefer my needlepoint on the outside because the beauty of the embroidery and the nuances of color and texture are more visible.

Bargello is an excellent choice for lamp embroidery. Almost any design that appeals to you can be adapted for this purpose. You may want to consider a series of banded horizontal patterns or a sequence of shaded and vertical stripes in colors that complement your room. Or, if your lamp base is cylindrical, you might use a single dramatic motif such as a stylized seashell or an abstract swirl of color to curve around it.

Careful measurements are essential in a project such as this. When you plan the size of the finished embroidery remember you'll need an embroidered border for turn-over beyond that.

Cut chuck roast to save on stew

By Polly Cramer

Inflation Fighter

DEAR POLLY — My inflation fighter has to do with the difference between the cost of stew meat and chuck pot roast. In the super-markets where I live the cost of stew meat is $1.09 to 1.19 a pound and a chuck pot roast cost 79¢ a pound. When I plan to have a pot roast and a stew in the same week I buy a chuck roast with about a pound and a half extra and I cut this extra pound and a half up into cubes and have my stew meat for at least 30¢ a pound cheaper. —MRS. B&PW Club hears child abuse facts

Earlyne Barnes, Sikeston Business and Professional Women's Club recording secretary, was the speaker for the evening at the June meeting of the B&PWC. She is employed by the Division of Family Services and her presentation was an informative program on child abuse. She spoke to club members concerning House Bill 578 which states that it is each person's lawful duty to report abused and neglected children. A toll- free number in Jefferson City (1-800-392-3738) can be called at any time to report such cases.

Plans for the coming year were discussed at the meeting and it was decided that the Club will hold it's annual Bosses Night in October and the B&PWC Woman of the Year banquet will be in March.

The club now has thirty-three paid members.

Tatty Tope, district director of District 19, reported to members on the Leadership Conference that was held recently in Columbia which she and Emma Owen, Sikeston B&PWC president, attended. It was also announced that a planning session for the District Conference, which will be held in Chaffee this year, will be held at the First National Bank Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

A white elephant auction was held at the close of the meeting with all proceeds going to the club for future projects. Hostess for the evening were Ella Louise Carroll, Margerie Jones and Esther Hitchcock.

Here's the Answer

Q. — I painted our dining room several months ago. There were some cracks in the walls. I tested to see whether the paint would cover the cracks and it did, so I painted all four walls. The paint covered all right and it looked fine, but now I see the cracks are beginning to reappear. What can I do about it?

A. — You'll have to repaint if the cracks are numerous, but this time you should do what you should have done in the first place — fill the cracks first. Use one of the patching compounds, being sure the mixture is pushed into the openings. If the cracks are wide, you should undercut them first; that is, make the bottoms of the openings wider than the top so that the new plaster will hold securely.

Q.—I have taken the old finish ish off a bedroom bureau, but have been unable to get off a slight reddish stain despite sanding. Since I want to put on a clear finish, what should I do?

A. — Use a wood bleach, following the instructions carefully, especially on the manner in which to rinse off the residue. Before you apply the clear finish, put on two coats of sealer, which in most cases will prevent the stain from bleeding through. There is an alternative. You can use a stain a bit darker than the one which won't come out. After it has dried for a few days, apply the sealer, wait another day, then use the clear finish.

Q. — I want to paper a ceiling in a room which isn't too high. Any advice?

A. — Yes. Use a light color without a pattern that is conspicuous. A dark color or a loud pattern will make the walls seem even shorter.

Q. — Getting ready to refinish an old table. Any way to tell whether the old finish is varnish or shellac or lacquer? I intend to use varnish in the refinishing by sanding down the old finish first.

A. — Turpentine (or mineral spirits) is the solvent for varnish, denatured alcohol for shellac, and lacquer thinner for lacquer. But it won't make any difference in your case. The only time you have to be careful is when the final finish will be lacquer, which acts as a kind of remover on varnish.

Q. — I want to apply lacquer over a table top. The present finish is in good condition. Does it have to be removed?

A. — Not if it's lacquer. If it's varnish, the new lacquer will tend to wrinkle the old finish.

Q. — I have some wood bleach I got in a hardware store about a year ago, but which was never used. It comes in two containers, neither of which was ever opened. Will the bleach still be in good condition?

A. — Yes. Since bleaches are chemicals, be sure you follow the manufacturer's directions to the letter.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, etc., are explained in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 30 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N. Y. 11743. Questions can not be answered individually.)

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have had troublesome bowels all my life and for the past few years have tried including some roughage in my daily diet. I very much like bran muffins but I wonder if the roughage effect of the bran is lost when it is in the form of muffins. Is it?

DEAR READER — No. One important way of increasing the cereal fiber in your diet is to use real whole-wheat bread and baked products containing bran. Watch out for some of the commercial breads claiming to be whole-wheat. Read the label carefully as much whole-wheat bread is made with about half white flour and then artificially colored.

A tea-cup of All-Bran or Bran Buds or two tea-cups of Bran Flakes will meet your daily needs for cereal fiber. There is more to preventing bowel problems than just bran. I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-1, Spastic or Irritable Colon and Constipation, to help you. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Is there such a thing as a lump in the throat due to a nervous condition. It causes dizziness and confusion. There is a rise in my blood pressure. I am taking blood pressure medicine and tranquilizers but they do not seem to be much help. The lump, or what appears to be so, still exists. I had this same problem years ago and it led to a peptic ulcer. It again is causing indigestion. I don't have any emotional problems but I have always been a very nervous person. I would appreciate any information you can give me on this. I am 65 years of age.

DEAR READER — For the benefit of others let me say at the outset that anyone who develops any difficulty in swallowing must consult a physician at once. Sometimes difficulty in swallowing is associated with a cancer of the esophagus. Early detection can lead to a cure in many cases — so don't delay. Let your doctor decide if it's a nervous condition or something more serious.

Since you have already seen a doctor I am certain that he has already ruled out those problems. In specific answer to your question, yes, you can have a feeling of a lump in the throat from a nervous condition. Doctors call this lump in the throat problem "globus hystericus." It is associated with anxiety. I would presume that the anxiety and problem that you are having is really responsible for the dizziness and confusion as well as the lump in your throat. It may also be contributing to your rise in blood pressure. Excess nervousness or tension and anxiety is sometimes associated with peptic ulcers. It is an underlying cause in many cases. The anxiety produces a sensation of a lump in the throat by causing improper contractions of the normal muscles in the esophagus and throat area responsible for swallowing.

You may need to ask your doctor to see if he can refer you to a psychiatrist for some evaluation of the emotional conflict that you must have even though you may not be aware of it. It's possible that a professional could help you enough that it would also improve your symptoms of dizziness, confusion and help to decrease the significance of your blood pressure problems. At least you are on the right track.

The case of the early bird that caught the worm

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Not even Popeye the Sailor liked spinach more than Ralph who, on any given Sunday, was known to down at least one or two cans of the stuff while watching a football game on TV. One Sunday, however, his favorite gastronomic delight threw him for a complete loss. Looking down into the can, he spotted a platoon of worms rushing through the leafy greenery as though they were plunging for a touchdown.

Ralph, horrified, found his stomach feeling like a reversed field. And, because he became extremely ill from the experience, he sued the owner of the supermarket--from whom he had purchased the spinach--for damages.

"The early bird that catches the worm," he told the judge, "is welcome to it. But, for me, food purchased at a supermarket must be fit for human consumption and a can crawling with worms ain't."

"Sure it is," responded the owner of the supermarket. "Worms are eaten by people all over the world. What's more, they're considered a delicacy. And, if Ralph got sick, it was purely a case of mind over matter."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit horrified Ralph to collect for his illness?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that it's apparently true that such creatures as worms, grasshoppers, snails, etc. are acceptable to certain tribes of American Indians as delicious morsels of food. It is also apparently true that canned Mexican worms grace the shelves of many delicatessens and, in certain swank social levels, which few of us ever reach, roasted snails are available with trays of hors d'oeuvres at cocktail parties.

However, concluded the judge, for the masses who have moved ahead of the Indians but who have not yet reached the snail set, such invertebrates as worms and snails are generally considered totally unwholesome and unfit for human consumption.

Sikeston area residents can have a $700,000 hospital built immediately if they raise $160,000 in a campaign which will begin Friday, according to E. P. Coleman, jr., president of the Missouri Delta Community Hospital. The hospital to be built in Sikeston for the area in a 25-mile radius was set up in 1942, but construction was made impossible by the war. Now construction of the hospital will cost approximately twice the amount raised and the hospital cannot be built if an additional $160,000 is not raised locally in the area.

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have had troublesome bowels all my life and for the past few years have tried including some roughage in my daily diet. I very much like bran muffins but I wonder if the roughage effect of the bran is lost when it is in the form of muffins. Is it?

DEAR READER — No. One important way of increasing the cereal fiber in your diet is to use real whole-wheat bread and baked products containing bran. Watch out for some of the commercial breads claiming to be whole-wheat. Read the label carefully as much whole-wheat bread is made with about half white flour and then artificially colored.

A tea-cup of All-Bran or Bran Buds or two tea-cups of Bran Flakes will meet your daily needs for cereal fiber. There is more to preventing bowel problems than just bran. I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-1, Spastic or Irritable Colon and Constipation, to help you. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Is there such a thing as a lump in the throat due to a nervous condition. It causes dizziness and confusion. There is a rise in my blood pressure. I am taking blood pressure medicine and tranquilizers but they do not seem to be much help. The lump, or what appears to be so, still exists. I had this same problem years ago and it led to a peptic ulcer. It again is causing indigestion. I don't have any emotional problems but I have always been a very nervous person. I would appreciate any information you can give me on this. I am 65 years of age.

DEAR READER — For the benefit of others let me say at the outset that anyone who develops any difficulty in swallowing must consult a physician at once. Sometimes difficulty in swallowing is associated with a cancer of the esophagus. Early detection can lead to a cure in many cases — so don't delay. Let your doctor decide if it's a nervous condition or something more serious.

Since you have already seen a doctor I am certain that he has already ruled out those problems. In specific answer to your question, yes, you can have a feeling of a lump in the throat from a nervous condition. Doctors call this lump in the throat problem "globus hystericus." It is associated with anxiety. I would presume that the anxiety and problem that you are having is really responsible for the dizziness and confusion as well as the lump in your throat. It may also be contributing to your rise in blood pressure. Excess nervousness or tension and anxiety is sometimes associated with peptic ulcers. It is an underlying cause in many cases. The anxiety produces a sensation of a lump in the throat by causing improper contractions of the normal muscles in the esophagus and throat area responsible for swallowing.

You may need to ask your doctor to see if he can refer you to a psychiatrist for some evaluation of the emotional conflict that you must have even though you may not be aware of it. It's possible that a professional could help you enough that it would also improve your symptoms of dizziness, confusion and help to decrease the significance of your blood pressure problems. At least you are on the right track.

The case of the early bird that caught the worm

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Not even Popeye the Sailor liked spinach more than Ralph who, on any given Sunday, was known to down at least one or two cans of the stuff while watching a football game on TV. One Sunday, however, his favorite gastronomic delight threw him for a complete loss. Looking down into the can, he spotted a platoon of worms rushing through the leafy greenery as though they were plunging for a touchdown.

Ralph, horrified, found his stomach feeling like a reversed field. And, because he became extremely ill from the experience, he sued the owner of the supermarket--from whom he had purchased the spinach--for damages.

"The early bird that catches the worm," he told the judge, "is welcome to it. But, for me, food purchased at a supermarket must be fit for human consumption and a can crawling with worms ain't."

"Sure it is," responded the owner of the supermarket. "Worms are eaten by people all over the world. What's more, they're considered a delicacy. And, if Ralph got sick, it was purely a case of mind over matter."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit horrified Ralph to collect for his illness?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that it's apparently true that such creatures as worms, grasshoppers, snails, etc. are acceptable to certain tribes of American Indians as delicious morsels of food. It is also apparently true that canned Mexican worms grace the shelves of many delicatessens and, in certain swank social levels, which few of us ever reach, roasted snails are available with trays of hors d'oeuvres at cocktail parties.

However, concluded the judge, for the masses who have moved ahead of the Indians but who have not yet reached the snail set, such invertebrates as worms and snails are generally considered totally unwholesome and unfit for human consumption.

Sikeston area residents can have a $700,000 hospital built immediately if they raise $160,000 in a campaign which will begin Friday, according to E. P. Coleman, jr., president of the Missouri Delta Community Hospital. The hospital to be built in Sikeston for the area in a 25-mile radius was set up in 1942, but construction was made impossible by the war. Now construction of the hospital will cost approximately twice the amount raised and the hospital cannot be built if an additional $160,000 is not raised locally in the area.

Mrs. Minnie Frances Mastersonk, 74 years old, wodow of the late Henry Masterson and a resident of Sikeston for the past 56 years, died at her home, 604 William, today, after an illness of three months.

Repentance, thanksgiving and rededication have been designated as the themes for the Presbyterian Church U.S. Bicentennial emphasis, with funds going to the self-development of the American Indians.

To carry out this theme, the Hunter Memorial Presbyterian Church, Allen Blvd. at Wakefield, will have an old-time camp meeting Saturday with camping by the youth group and families, on the church grounds, along with a quilt and antique display from 4:30 -5:30 p.m., a basket dinner from 5:30-6:30 p.m., old time singing, conducted by Rev. Ministers get degrees

No Seminex grads to be ordained

ST. LOUIS — Actions on Constitutional matters, Seminex, and divisions within the Lutheran Church -- Missouri Synod highlighted the Missouri District Convention meeting in St. Louis, June 20-23.

The Convention voted to request that Dr. J.A. O. Preus, president of the Lutheran Church-- Missouri Synod, hand down a decision soon on the charges of false doctrine against Dr. John Tietjen, former President of Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, and now president of Concordia Seminary in Exile (Seminex). Dr. Tietjen was exonerated following a lengthy investigation by Rev. Oscar Gerken, vice president of the Missouri District. However, the case was appealed and the final judgment now rests with the Synodical president.

Seminex graduates may not be ordained and installed as pastors in Missouri District churches, according to a resolution adopted by the convention. The district president was authorized to withhold subsidy if a pastor refuses to comply with prescribed procedures for certification.

Constitutional changes will streamline the administration of the Missouri Lutheran District. One objective of the changes is to provide broader participation of people on the parish level and to avoid centralization of authority.

5 ministers honored

Five area ministers received degrees at commencement ceremonies June 20 at the Fellowship Baptist Church in Sikeston.

Receiving Diplomas of Theology were Lewis Stone of Winchester, Ky., presently without a church; Marvin Butrum of St. Louis, pastor of Temple Baptist Church in Sikeston.

The Prayer

PRAYER: Our Father, help us to want to do good because of our love for You and not for what others will think about us. Amen.

If your blankets are badly worn, you can cut out the bad spots and combine what's left to make one big blanket, which can now be used for the warm interlining of a quilt cover.

Ministers get degrees

No Seminex grads to be ordained

ST. LOUIS — Actions on Constitutional matters, Seminex, and divisions within the Lutheran Church -- Missouri Synod highlighted the Missouri District Convention meeting in St. Louis, June 20-23.

The Convention voted to request that Dr. J.A. O. Preus, president of the Lutheran Church-- Missouri Synod, hand down a decision soon on the charges of false doctrine against Dr. John Tietjen, former President of Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, and now president of Concordia Seminary in Exile (Seminex). Dr. Tietjen was exonerated following a lengthy investigation by Rev. Oscar Gerken, vice president of the Missouri District. However, the case was appealed and the final judgment now rests with the Synodical president.

Seminex graduates may not be ordained and installed as pastors in Missouri District churches, according to a resolution adopted by the convention. The district president was authorized to withhold subsidy if a pastor refuses to comply with prescribed procedures for certification.

Constitutional changes will streamline the administration of the Missouri Lutheran District. One objective of the changes is to provide broader participation of people on the parish level and to avoid centralization of authority.

5 ministers honored

Five area ministers received degrees at commencement ceremonies June 20 at the Fellowship Baptist Church in Sikeston.

Receiving Diplomas of Theology were Lewis Stone of Winchester, Ky., presently without a church; Marvin Butrum of St. Louis, pastor of Temple Baptist Church in Sikeston.

Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Theology degrees were presented to Ralph Buckley of Bernie, pastor of Fellowship Baptist Church in Sikeston, and Robert L. Fox of Rector, Ark. pastor of First Baptist Church of Oran.

The Rev. Fox was also presented a Doctor of Divinity Degree.

Chicago man is elected head of Synod

RIVER FOREST, Ill. (AP) — A Chicago-area clergyman has been elected president of the new English District of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

Pastor George Bornemann of suburban Elmhurst was elected to the post Sunday after delegates to the district convention voted to withdraw from the Missouri Synod and create a new church structure.

The former president and twelve board members quit to become a part of a new English Synod. Pastor Bornemann had been vice president of the district and defeated the Pastor Paul Barth, who had been acting president of the district since April.

Area Catholic's to hold Bicentennial Mass June 26

Catholics of Cape Girardeau and the surrounding area will gather with Bishop Bernard F. Law and clergy to anticipate the 200th birthday of the nation in a bicentennial Mass June 26.

As signs of the personal history of the Catholic Church in Southeast Missouri, they will carry pennants representing each parish participating in the celebration. One side will be marked with the name of the parish and the date of its founding; the other side with a message of peace and justice to all Christians. Two representatives from each parish will march in procession with the pennant.

A second procession at the Offertory (Offering of the Gifts) will draw attention to the freedoms and right expressed in the Declaration of Independence and the Bill of Rights. The mission cross, The Bible, a shepherd's staff and grains of wheat will be offered as symbols of the people's attempt to live and spread the gospel message in southeastern Missouri. Also presented in the procession will be a newspaper, a scroll and a book, pointing to the individual's freedom of expression, freedom of worship and right to education guaranteed by the Constitution.

Each person attending the Mass will receive a special Bicentennial program. The cover on the booklet is a photograph of the oldest remaining church structure in the Springfield-Cape Girardeau diocese, now standing in the center of the St. Lawrence cemetery in New Hamburg. Constructed as a chapel in 1847 by the pastor, Father Cajetan Zapotti, the present St. Lawrence Church (renovated several times since) replaced it as a place of worship during the Civil War.

The booklet, designed by Robert G. Lee, editor of the diocesan newspaper, The Mirror, contains a brief history of the Springfield-Cape Girardeau diocese and the music for the Mass.

Sr. Cordula of St. Mary's Cathedral School selected the music, which will be led by the adult choirs of St. Vincent Church and St. Mary's Cathedral. The Boy Scouts and Knights of Columbus Honor Guard will be present in their respective uniforms and formations.

A reception will be held in St. Mary's Cathedral School cafeteria following Mass.

Members fail in trying to close case

CLAYTON, Mo. (AP) — Conservative members of the Missouri district of the Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod defeated an attempt Tuesday to ask that the heresy case against the Rev. Dr. John H. Tietgen be closed.

But the conservatives, holding a slight edge at the district convention at Concordia Seminary, failed in a move which would have driven officers with opposing viewpoints out of the district.

Dr. Tietjen was suspended as president of Concordia Seminary in 1973, setting off a dispute that eventually led to formation of a breakaway seminary called Seminex.

A conservative board of control at Concordia found him guilty of false doctrine and malfeasance in office. But the Rev. Oscar A. Gerken of Cape Girdardeau found him innocent of the false doctrine charges and the case was appealed to the Rev. Dr. Jacob O. A. Preus, conservative president of the synod.

Television viewers to see the other side of Allen

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Television viewers will have an opportunity in coming months to sample both the funny and the serious sides of entertainer Steve Allen.

Already airing in some cities is a syndicated series of 10 comedy specials which reunites Allen with some of the top comedians who worked on his TV shows over the past 20 years, including Don Knotts, Louis Nye, Bill Dana, Pat Harrington, Tim Conway and Gabe Dell.

Each program in this "Laugh-Back" series runs 90 minutes and features not only new comedy routines with Steve and his chums but also some classic sketches they did on his old shows. Allen resurrected most of the old black and white footage from his own files.

Later this year, Allen's serious side will emerge in "Meeting of Minds," six one-hour programs that he wrote and appears in for the Public Broadcasting Service.

The format provides for discussion of current national and international issues by famous historical figures such as St. Thomas Aquinas, Cleopatra, Thomas Jefferson and President Theodore Roosevelt, based on their written and reported views. The PBS series will present a different foursome in each of the six installments, with Allen serving as moderator.

It's a series he has been nurturing for 16 years despite repeated rebuffs from the networks and other commercial broadcasters who said the idea was admirable but wouldn't draw much of an audience.

Projects of such diverse nature are hardly surprising from Allen, whose abundant creative talents also extend to dramatic acting, playing the piano and writing poetry, novels, plays and songs.

But he is best known as a TV funnyman and talk show host. Allen, in fact, was the first host of "The Tonight Show" on NBC, holding the job from 1953 to 1956. Unfortunately, none of the film from that period will be seen in the new "Laugh-Back" series.

Allen explained why during an interview in his San Fernando Valley office — "Someone at NBC, upon discovering a few years ago that the network was running short of space in its New Jersey storage warehouse, solved the problem by burning not only my three years of 'The Tonight Show' but just about all the films that NBC had produced from, I think, around 1949 to 1955."

Still, his numerous other shows over the years produced plenty of great routines from which to choose for "Laugh-Back." In one installment screened to preview the new series, in fact, the old material was funnier by far than the new.

Allen says these two recent forays into the familiar folds of television have done nothing to change his opinion of the medium.

"Economically it's very healthy," he observed. "Creatively it's probably about as bad or as good as it ever was, depending on one's requirements.

"I'm grateful that there are good shows on the air from time to time."

Court ruling to save millions says Missouri budget director

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A U.S. Supreme Court decision overturning the extension of federal minimum wage and overtime provisions to state and local government workers will save the state millions of dollars it would otherwise have been forced to spend, according to Budget Director Mark Edelman.

"Had the decision gone the other way it would have cost us a bundle," Edelman said shortly after the high court issued its opinion Thursday.

The major portion of the ruling, however will not reduce state personnel expenditures because those federal wage provisions had not been in force pending the high court ruling.

The state will save at least "a couple hundred thousand dollars", Edelman said, because the 5-4 ruling of the high court also reversed a 1968 decision under which the state had been forced to pay minimum wages to mental patients working in state mental hospitals.

Working patients at the Fulton State Hospital, the state's largest mental health facility, had been receiving higher than traditional wages under that 1968 decision, Edelman said.

The decision against applying the current minimum wage of $2.30 an hour would have had little impact on state personnel expenditures, officials have said, since nearly all state workers are currently being paid that amount or more.

But the decision also threw out requirements that state and local governments compensate employes in additional money rather than "compensatory time off" for overtime. It was that provision which would have skyrocketed state personnel costs, Edelman said.

The budget chief also indicated that the ruling, which affirmed the special status of states to challenge congressional actions, could head off efforts by Congress to mandate public employe collective bargaining for the states.

The Missouri legislature has continually rejected attempts to give public workers the right of full collective bargaining and unicnization.

Most public workers now have only the right to present wage and working condition proposals to governing bodies and then discuss those issues.

The decision on what employe benefits will be, however, is a unilateral one for the governing body.

Richland to receive state monies

GRAY RIDGE — The Richland R-1 Board of Education has been informed that the Richland R-1 School District received its full entitlement of state schools monies in the fourth payment.

Other items discussed at the board meeting were the Certified Elementary Teacher Association program for youth workers, the furniture received for grades 1-6, the Summer Drivers Education Program,the increase in Missouri State Teachers Association Insurance for the 1976-77 school year, and the budget for the 1976-77 school year.

Bootheel flying bank robber is found guilty in California

KENNETT — Dennis Leo Lehman, who faces state and federal charges stemming from the Jan. 15 robbery of the Bank of Kennett's Bootheel Plaza Facility, has been found guilty by a federal court jury in San Francisco of robbing the Humboldt National Bank in Arcata, Calif.

The jury trial in San Francisco spanned five days before the jury returned the guilty verdict in the federal courtroom of Judge J. Renfrew, who has set sentencing for July 7.

U.S. Attorney John Lockie presented the state's case, calling personnel at the Humboldt Bank who identified him as the man who entered the bank on Valentine's Day and took more than $30,000 at gunpoint before making his escape in a plane.

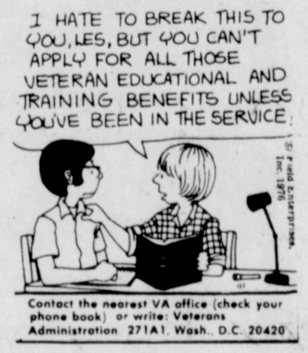
Harry Hellerstein, the public defender assigned to defend Lehman, did not put the defendant on the stand due to his lengthy prior criminal record.

Two psychiatrists and a psychologist, testifying for the defense, said Lehman was a classic, "manic depressive," citing his past suicidal attempts, and his delusions of grandeur during his extreme phases, at which time he would commit bank robberies.

However, the testimony was rebutted by a state psychiatrist, who said his examinations showed Lehman to be a sane individual with no manic tendencies.

Hellerstein, who presented a defense of "not guilty by reason of mental disease or defect" to the jury, said in his closing remarks that Lehman was a sick person who could be helped by treatment, but not prison, describing him as very bright, very interesting and very innovative.

Lehman, who has a prior history of robbing banks, is also wanted on state and federal charges in Michigan, where he is suspected of robbing a bank.



Prosecutor looks back at Patty's trial

'Old MacMonkey' was turning point in trial

By Murray Olderman

PITTSBURG, Calif. — (NEA) — In the historical post mortems of the trial of Patricia Campbell Hearst, no single item looms more important than the accidental discovery of the significance of a little piece of carved stone found in her purse at the time of arrest.

More than anything, it shattered the imposing credibility of Patty Hearst as a witness — and vaulted James Browning, the prosecuting attorney, into competency as a courtroom advocate.

This then is the saga of Old MacMonkey, as an FBI report described the key artifact of the Hearst trial.

Browning, an Ichabod Cranish character in appearance, has been in demand as a speaker coast-to-coast at such disparate places as the Harvard Law School and a Contra Costa County newspaper workshop — the result of his trial victory over the more spectacular F. Lee Bailey. And the highlight is when he recounts his solution to the mystery of Old MacMoneky.

> 'My strategy from the beginning was to neutralize the psychiatric testimony of the defense and to deal with the facts."

The national press had been almost contemptuous of Browning's court work. In his cross-examination of Patty Hearst, Browning had brought up the subject of Willie Wolfe, an SLA member who, she contended, had raped her in a closet. In a subsequent tape, she talked glowingly of Cujo (Wolfe), who died in a Los Angeles shootout. Wasn't it true, Browning asked, that she said she had a strong feeling for Wolfe?

Urging her still further, he asked, "What was that feeling?"

Patty looked at him cooly and snapped:

"I couldn't stand him."

On Willie Wolfe's body the police had found a small stone figurine, about an inch and a half long, with a hole pierced through the head where the ears would be. A tape of Patty Hearst mentioned the "monkey" Wolfe wore on a chain around his neck and speculated the "pigs" probably had it — the FBI transcribed it as an "Old MacMonkey."

"We never could figure out what that meant," reviews Browning.

While the trial was still on, he went home one night and read an interview with Bill and Emily Harris, Patty's SLA companions, in New Times Magazine. The article referred to a stone relic in the shape of a monkey face that Willie once gave to Patty.

"That rang a bell," says Browning.

The next morning, he contacted the FBI and asked for a review of the articles found in Patty's purse at the time of her capture. He vaguely remembered a stone artifact. The FBI reported there was a small stone in the shape of a head among the contents.

"Old MacMonkey. . .Old Mac. . .it still didn't seem to make sense," notes Browning. He contacted an anthropologist from UCLA to look over the tiny talisman. The man's speciality was Mexican archaelogical periods. He quickly verified the fact that the stone in Patty's purse, like the one on Willie Wolfe, was an "Olmec" monkey — referring to a period in Mexican Indian culture. It's not really a monkey — Mexicans refer to all such trinkets as "momos" (monkey).

In his final summation to the jury, Browning displayed the little stone head found in Patty's purse after her arrest. He described the one found under Wolfe's charred body. And he mused about her carrying the matching artifact around more than a year after Wolfe's death.

"She couldn't stand him," he said pointedly to the jurors, "and yet there is that little stone face that can't say anything. I submit to you it can tell us a lot."

The Olmec monkey was a telling blow against Patty's testimony.

Browning, chortling, is quite aware that he was supposed to be the bumbler and Bailey the master strategist. But he feels Bailey didn't understand the turf on which he was operating and therefore made some grave tactical mistakes, among them the "character assassination" of Dr. Joel Fort, the psychiatric expert for the prosecution.

Television viewers to see the other side of Allen

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Television viewers will have an opportunity in coming months to sample both the funny and the serious sides of entertainer Steve Allen.

Already airing in some cities is a syndicated series of 10 comedy specials which reunites Allen with some of the top comedians who worked on his TV shows over the past 20 years, including Don Knotts, Louis Nye, Bill Dana, Pat Harrington, Tim Conway and Gabe Dell.

Each program in this "Laugh-Back" series runs 90 minutes and features not only new comedy routines with Steve and his chums but also some classic sketches they did on his old shows. Allen resurrected most of the old black and white footage from his own files.

Later this year, Allen's serious side will emerge in "Meeting of Minds," six one-hour programs that he wrote and appears in for the Public Broadcasting Service.

The format provides for discussion of current national and international issues by famous historical figures such as St. Thomas Aquinas, Cleopatra, Thomas Jefferson and President Theodore Roosevelt, based on their written and reported views. The PBS series will present a different foursome in each of the six installments, with Allen serving as moderator.

It's a series he has been nurturing for 16 years despite repeated rebuffs from the networks and other commercial broadcasters who said the idea was admirable but wouldn't draw much of an audience.

Projects of such diverse nature are hardly surprising from Allen, whose abundant creative talents also extend to dramatic acting, playing the piano and writing poetry, novels, plays and songs.

But he is best known as a TV funnyman and talk show host. Allen, in fact, was the first host of "The Tonight Show" on NBC, holding the job from 1953 to 1956. Unfortunately, none of the film from that period will be seen in the new "Laugh-Back" series.

Allen explained why during an interview in his San Fernando Valley office — "Someone at NBC, upon discovering a few years ago that the network was running short of space in its New Jersey storage warehouse, solved the problem by burning not only my three years of 'The Tonight Show' but just about all the films that NBC had produced from, I think, around 1949 to 1955."

Still, his numerous other shows over the years produced plenty of great routines from which to choose for "Laugh-Back." In one installment screened to preview the new series, in fact, the old material was funnier by far than the new.

Allen says these two recent forays into the familiar folds of television have done nothing to change his opinion of the medium.

"Economically it's very healthy," he observed. "Creatively it's probably about as bad or as good as it ever was, depending on one's requirements.

"I'm grateful that there are good shows on the air from time to time."

Richland to receive state monies

GRAY RIDGE — The Richland R-1 Board of Education has been informed that the Richland R-1 School District received its full entitlement of state schools monies in the fourth payment.

Other items discussed at the board meeting were the Certified Elementary Teacher Association program for youth workers, the furniture received for grades 1-6, the Summer Drivers Education Program,the increase in Missouri State Teachers Association Insurance for the 1976-77 school year, and the budget for the 1976-77 school year.

Court ruling to save millions says Missouri budget director

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A U.S. Supreme Court decision overturning the extension of federal minimum wage and overtime provisions to state and local government workers will save the state millions of dollars it would otherwise have been forced to spend, according to Budget Director Mark Edelman.

"Had the decision gone the other way it would have cost us a bundle," Edelman said shortly after the high court issued its opinion Thursday.

The major portion of the ruling, however will not reduce state personnel expenditures because those federal wage provisions had not been in force pending the high court ruling.

The state will save at least "a couple hundred thousand dollars", Edelman said, because the 5-4 ruling of the high court also reversed a 1968 decision under which the state had been forced to pay minimum wages to mental patients working in state mental hospitals.

Working patients at the Fulton State Hospital, the state's largest mental health facility, had been receiving higher than traditional wages under that 1968 decision, Edelman said.

The decision against applying the current minimum wage of $2.30 an hour would have had little impact on state personnel expenditures, officials have said, since nearly all state workers are currently being paid that amount or more.

But the decision also threw out requirements that state and local governments compensate employes in additional money rather than "compensatory time off" for overtime. It was that provision which would have skyrocketed state personnel costs, Edelman said.

The budget chief also indicated that the ruling, which affirmed the special status of states to challenge congressional actions, could head off efforts by Congress to mandate public employe collective bargaining for the states.

The Missouri legislature has continually rejected attempts to give public workers the right of full collective bargaining and unicnization.

Most public workers now have only the right to present wage and working condition proposals to governing bodies and then discuss those issues.

The decision on what employe benefits will be, however, is a unilateral one for the governing body.

Bootheel flying bank robber is found guilty in California

KENNETT — Dennis Leo Lehman, who faces state and federal charges stemming from the Jan. 15 robbery of the Bank of Kennett's Bootheel Plaza Facility, has been found guilty by a federal court jury in San Francisco of robbing the Humboldt National Bank in Arcata, Calif.

The jury trial in San Francisco spanned five days before the jury returned the guilty verdict in the federal courtroom of Judge J. Renfrew, who has set sentencing for July 7.

U.S. Attorney John Lockie presented the state's case, calling personnel at the Humboldt Bank who identified him as the man who entered the bank on Valentine's Day and took more than $30,000 at gunpoint before making his escape in a plane.

Harry Hellerstein, the public defender assigned to defend Lehman, did not put the defendant on the stand due to his lengthy prior criminal record.

Two psychiatrists and a psychologist, testifying for the defense, said Lehman was a classic, "manic depressive," citing his past suicidal attempts, and his delusions of grandeur during his extreme phases, at which time he would commit bank robberies.

However, the testimony was rebutted by a state psychiatrist, who said his examinations showed Lehman to be a sane individual with no manic tendencies.

Hellerstein, who presented a defense of "not guilty by reason of mental disease or defect" to the jury, said in his closing remarks that Lehman was a sick person who could be helped by treatment, but not prison, describing him as very bright, very interesting and very innovative.

Lehman, who has a prior history of robbing banks, is also wanted on state and federal charges in Michigan, where he is suspected of robbing a bank.

Rhodes says House reformers were drafted

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican Leader John J. Rhodes says Democratic-backed accounting overhauls for the House were drafted in a climate of "panic rather than reform" in the wake of the payroll-sex scandal and don't deal with power abuses.

"We cannot afford to sweep this climate of scandal under the rug," Rhodes declared Thursday. "It will not go away. The people will not let it go away."

The Democrats' sweeping payroll and expense accounting revisions faced a hurdle today in the House Administration Committee where some members want to force full House action rather than have the changes considered only by the panel.

In the wake of the Capitol Hill payroll-sex scandal, the House Democratic Caucus approved 12 accounting revisions Wednesday night and ordered the committee to implement 10 of them. But on Thursday, Republicans and several Democrats contended the caucus has no business telling them what to do.

Rep. Dawson Mathis, D-Ga., accusing the caucus of trying to make the committee "do their dirty work," led a fight to make the full House act on the revisions.

Rep. J. Herbert Burke of Florida was among Republicans who joined in, saying: "This idea of going off half-cocked to make some group look like a bunch of heroes doesn't make much sense to me."

Rep. Lloyd Meeds, D-Wash., who helped draft the revisions, predicted the full House would kill some or most of them.

The committee has the authority to make most of the changes without asking for full House action. The Democratic caucus wants the panel to make the changes and then surrender its power to take those actions. The Administration Committee was vested with that authority in 1971 at the request of its then-chairman, Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio.

But some Democrats want the panel to surrender that power first and then recommend the accounting changes to the full House where they could be amended.

The payroll-sex scandal was triggered by Elizabeth Ray's charges that Hays kept her on his committee payroll solely to be his mistress. Hays has denied the charge but has resigned as chairman of the committee.

The only revision designed to cover such a case would require a monthly accounting of every House employe's job and pay.

Other recommendations would consolidate congressmen's expense allowances, abolish their $1,140 annual postage allowance and end their privilege of saving leftover stationery money for retirement.

Rhodes said that while the Democratic proposals look to the future, there are no provisions to "expose and punish all abuses of power that have taken place up to this time."

Man may be extradicted to Illinois

CHARLESTON— A Dyersburg, Tenn. man, Jerry Christopher Howell, 35, is being held in Mississippi County Jail on a charge of public intoxication. Deputy Sheriff Robert Smith said Howell will probably be extradicted to Illinois on charges of issuing no account checks.

Howell was arrested about 1:30 a.m. Thursday on the public intoxication charge and blank checks from banks in Vienna, Ill. and Perryville were found in his possession.

A check with the Bank revealed Howell had written several checks in the Carbondale, Ill. area on the Perryville Bank.

Judge given option to require course

BLOOMFIELD— The city council Thursday night adopted an ordinance giving the police judge the option of making a person convicted of a traffic violation attend a driver's education course.

The action was urged by Police Judge Howard Stevens.

The law will allow the judge to suspend sentencing, pending the successful completion of the course by the convicted person or to attend such a course instead of, or in addition to, the regular penalty.

Stevens told the council that under this law he can recommend to the state that points not be assessed against the violator's license if he completes the course.

The ordinance was read three times and adopted unanimously by the council.

In a related decision, the council agreed to more actively enforce a 25-mile -per-hour speed limit in the city, since it now has a radar gun.

City ordinance sets the speed limit at 25-miles-per-hour everywhere in the city, unless otherwise marked, but has been haphazardly enforced in the past.

Essex man is jailed on drug charges

BLOOMFIELD— Darrel R. Martin, 26, of Essex Route Two has been charged with manufacturing marijuana and will appear in Magistrate Court at Bloomfield. No court date has been set.

The Stoddard County Sheriff's Department was given a tip early last week that a large crop of marijuana was being grown near Avert.

While the sheriff and deputies were examining the plants, Martin was discovered in the field. A second person fled and has not been apprehended.

On June 17, Sheriff Ralph Mouser and deputies, Dennis Fowler and Bob Barker, along with unidentified special officer, pulled the 340 plants except for a few needed for identification, and burned the field.

When Sheriff Mouser returned to his vehicle after completing the burning, he found that three tires on his vehicle had been slashed.

Truck recovered

CHARLESTON — A 1975 model two-ton truck, stolen sometime Thursday night from the Mississippi County Highway Department off Highway 60 two miles west of town, was recovered early today in a wheat field on Route NN about 1½ mile north of Highway 60.

Deputy Sheriff Robert Smith and Ronald Ryan of the highway patrol, acting on a tip from Lindell Estes, an area farmer, found the truck stuck in a wheat field owned by Lindsay Hurley.

Smith said the truck had apparently been stolen to pull another vehicle, which had been stuck in the field road.

The truck had been driven through a locked gate at the highway department, damaging the front end of the truck, gate and fence.

Court reappoints 5 to commission

BENTON— Bob Henzi, director of the Bootheel Commission on Criminal Justice (BCCJ) reported to the Scott County Court Thursday, that a letter of appointment of commission members for Scott County is needed by Aug. 1.

Henzi, reminded the court of the federal regulation that 51 per cent of the members be elected officers.

The court then reappointed Sheriff John Dennis of Benton, Mayor L. F. Wheeler of Miner, Judge Eldon Ziegenhorn of Sikeston, Tom Gilmore, of Sikeston and Judge Louis Hirschowitz of Oran.

Sheriff Dennis informed the court that he was vacating the county owned home Thursday which had been available to the sheriff. The court is considering plans to use the residence as an office for the Sheriff's Department since it is located next to the county jail.

Advance seeks bids

ADVANCE — A variety of agenda items were acted on at a recent meeting of the Advance Board of Education.

The board authorized the requests for bids to furnish milk, bread products, bus tires, gas and petroleum products for the coming school year and accepted a bid from Jaymac Equipment Co. of Cape Girardeau for a new heating unit in the band room.

In other action, the board accepted the resignation of Mrs. Janice Aslin, school librarian, and employed Mrs. Odetta Daniel as a school secretary and Mrs. Rozelle Cook as a teacher aide.

It was announced that contracts have been offered to Mrs. Teresa Kielhofner and William McVay and that the following positions need to be filled: High school principal, high school science instructor, high school guidance counselor, librarian and high school social studies teacher. Many of these positions were left vacant because of mass firings by the board in April for which it offered no explanation.

Kuhn orders Finley to play trio

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn went to bat again and took a swing at a pitch of Oakland A's owner Charles Finley.

If Kuhn thought he had hit a game-winning homer, he quickly learned there are more innings to be played before this game is over.

Kuhn announced Thursday he was directing Finley that Vida Blue, Rollie Fingers and Joe Rudi be allowed to rejoin the A's immediately.

Finley's next pitch was that Kuhn could expect a $10 million lawsuit today.

The ruling and Finley's reaction were the latest in a wild chain of events which began the night of June 15 when Finley sold the trio for a total of $3.5 million. Blue was sold to the New York Yankees for $1.5 million, while Rudi and Fingers were purchased by Boston for a million dollars each.

The sale of the players set off a storm of protest by owners and managers, with Minnesota Twins President Calvin Griffith calling it "a dark day for baseball."

Kuhn later held a hearing into the sales and shocked most people a week ago by rejecting them and ordering that the trio be kept on the Oakland roster.

Finley then threatened legal action and ordered A's Manager Chuck Tanner to not use the trio and not allow them to be with the team during its games.

Thursday Kuhn met with Paul Corvino, a business consultant for Blue. Corvino indicated a multi-million dollar lawsuit was hanging over the commissioner's head concerning a three-year contract for Blue's services which was signed prior to his sale. Corvino said that Blue would be coming to New York today "to meet with lawyers and analyze the situation."

Blue later claimed Corvino was pitching without being sent into the game by the left-hander and said in Anaheim it might be Corvino he takes into court.

"Corvino had no authority to finalize a contract for me. He had no power of attorney," Blue said after rejoining the A's for last night's game.

All three players were in the Oakland dugout at Anaheim Thursday, but were not used. Rudi said he was depressed over his inactivity, but didn't expect to be used.

"I just want to play somewhere. It's been a dismal two weeks."

And despite the ruling, it may be a while before the players are used again.

They weren't used in Thursday's 2-1 loss at Anaheim and if they aren't used soon Kuhn may take additional action.

Although his ruling did not specifically say Finley had to play the trio, Kuhn indicated in an interview he wanted them to play.

"Lee MacPhail (the AL President) and I both feel they should be playing ... not only in uniform, but playing," Kuhn said.

"We're going to Federal Court in Chicago Friday morning to file a $10 million lawsuit," Finley said. "My attorney feels the latest edict shows bad faith by Kuhn. It's not the first time he has shown that to me and the A's."

A watching official grits his teeth in suspense as Dave Roberts brushes the bar in the pole vault at the U.S. Olympic trials in Eugene, Oregon, Tuesday night. The bar stayed up and Roberts set a world mark of 18 feet, 8¼ inches, breaking the record set by Earl Bell of Arkansas State earlier this year. (AP Wirephoto)

Williams Bros., Marks & Sikeston Motors win

Williams Brothers Construction led all the way enroute to a 16-10 Senior Girls Softball League decision over Clinton Construction Thursday night.

Clinton outhit the winners, nine safeties to six, but Williams scored four runs in the first inning and never trailed thereafter.

Rissa Thompson's single in the last of the sixth completed a three-run inning and gave Bridger a come-from-behind 7-6 victory over Marks Food Mart in Minor Division action. The game was halted by the time limit. Bridger had led since the first inning only to have Marks score six runs in the top of the sixth. But, the host team came back to win.

Barkett's E-Z Mart scored three runs in the first, but was shutout the rest of the way while dropping a 7-3 game to Sikeston Motor

Texas hands Royals 6th straight loss; now 2 out

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — The Texas Rangers have suddenly found themselves a patsy who fortunately happens to be their No. 1 rival in the American League West Division.

The Rangers took advantage of clutch pitching by veterans Steve Hargan and Joe Hoerner and Kansas City mental lapses to rip the Royals 5-2 Thursday night and move within two games of them in the hottest chase in baseball.

"They have beat the hell out of us for two years, but now our guys feel they can be had," said Rangers Manager Frank Lucchesi.

The crippled Royals have dropped six consecutive games and have lost four straight to the Rangers — a team they owned with a 14-4 season record in 1975.

Lucchesi said, "I wish we had them in town for a couple more games, because when a team gets going bad it very often gets worse."

"It should be a very interesting race, but if you think I'm fool enough to predict it will be between Kansas City and Texas, you're crazy. It is way too early in the year for that kind of talk.

"I do have a lot of confidence in my team.... We are kind of a streaky club but that is because we are young. Our veteran pitching staff should help settle the club down."

The Royals turned in a dismal display of base running as they saw three runners thrown out. On the other end of the scale, Texas twice scored runs after the Royals picked off Rangers base runners and then threw the ball away.

Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog was livid in the Royals' dressing room, fuming, "That's the worse game we've played since I've been here. We ran into five outs on the bases and gave them three runs.

"I never thought I'd see these guys play like that. I never imagined we've ever be that bad...."

Herzog concluded, "That was a dandy — the best thing was that nobody else got hurt."

Steve Hargan picked up his second victory in four decisions as he made only his second start of the year. The 39-year-old Hoerner got the last six outs, relying on his fast ball instead of his usual deadly breaking stuff.

Hoerner said, "I never threw them hardly any breaking balls. I was just serving up my 75-mile-an-hour fast ball."

The Rangers victimizwd Kansas City starter Al Fitzmorris, who is now 8-4 for the year.

Hoerner, who has a 1.86 earned run average, said, "The victory is especially sweet because this is the same team that released me in the winter of 1974 and said that I couldn't pitch any more."

Texas built up a 4-0 lead against the Royals and coasted home behind Hoerner's two innings of hitless relief pitching.

Kansas City limped out of town to begin a home stand against California while the Rangers meet Chicago tonight in a doubleheader.

Gaylord Perry, 7-5, and Steve Barr, 1-3, go up against Terry Forster, 1-4, and Ken Brett, 3-1, of the White Sox.

Stage set for Ali-Inoli bout

TOKYO (AP) — After standing impassively in front of boxer Muhammad Ali's threatening jabs, wrestler Antonio Inoki shed his splendid robe, with its gold sun over Japan's symbolic Mt. Fuji, and beckoned.

With that showy gesture after their weigh-in Friday, Inoki joined in the mood of spectacle for their "World Martial Arts Championship" Saturday in which he is supposed to wrestle, Ali is supposed to box, and such actual martial arts as karate are mostly banned.

So far, Inoki had reacted to Ali by sitting with arms folded and putting on his most inscrutable face, as he did when Ali came in for the weigh-in shouting "Inoki, Inoki ..."

Except for muttering "ano baka" — "that idiot" — he left all the talking to the world heavyweight boxing champion.

And Ali brought howls of delight from Japanese newsmen when he went off shouting "mata ashita" — "I'll see you tomorrow." Ali didn't really follow through on his "sayonara," however. He circled back to block Inoki's exit, and that's when Inoki beckoned and Ali's handlers finally dragged Ali away as the boxer screamed, "Let me at him."

Inoki, whose main credentials are that he is president of New Japan Pro Wrestling Co., weighed in at 221½ pounds. Ali was 218¼.

The other formalities of the weigh-in ceremony were declarations by both fighters' doctors that they were in top condition. Dr. Sanzo Sato said Inoki's recent left shoulder injury had been cured.

Aside from that, it was all posturing, starting with the late arrival of both fighters.

Ali's camp had let it be known the boxer wouldn't appear until Inoki's camp returned signed copies of a winner-take-all agreement. Ali's handlers said that when Ali signed it Wednesday night, he thought it was a publicity stunt and he couldn't turn down a challenge.

But, they said, only Ali's manager had the authority to make such a deal, that Ali deserves his $6 million guarantee because he is the drawing card and Inoki has little to lose, and Ali's Black Muslim religion bans such a gamble as a winner-take-all deal. Inoki was expected to make up to $4 million, depending on fight revenue.

Evert leads WTA's threat to boycott Wimbledon; want equality in pay

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Under the threat of a women's boycott of Wimbledon next year, the All-England Club is expected today to answer demands from Chris Evert and other top women tennis stars for equal pay with the men.

"Percentage-wise, we want equality. And unless we get it next year, we won't come," said Miss Evert, the 21-year-old honey blonde from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and No. 1 seed for the women's title.

This year the men's champion will get $21,875 while the women's champion will get $17,500. There is also less for the other women prize winners.

Miss Evert, president of the Women's Tennis Association, said the WTA was asking its members to sign a form agreeing to boycott Wimbledon in 1976 unless their demands are met.

She declined further comment on the dispute Thursday after leading the women's seeds through to the fourth round by cruising past Lesley Hunt of Australia 6-1, 6-0.

"I shall be meeting the All-England Club and presenting our case Friday morning," she said.

Asked if she ever played or practiced with men, she said: "I used to practice with Jimmy Connors, but that's all. I feel they play so much better than I do, it's unfair to ask them."

Connors, the No. 2 men's singles seed here from Belleville, Ill., and Miss Evert were once engaged but have since drifted apart.

Unconfirmed reports about the women's demands said they also wanted an equal number of entries with the men, who have 128 competitors this year compared to 96 women.

The All-England Club, which stages the 99-year-old tournament, already has an agreement to increase the women's share of the prizes over a period of a few years until parity — at least for the winner — is reached. But Miss Evert and the WTA apparently are dissatisfied with that concession.

The men appeared to have reservations about supporting the protest.

John Newcombe of Australia, president of the Association of Tennis Professionals, said: "Equal money comes down to equal performance and when I have the full facts I think you will find the girls are overpaid."

Defending men's title holder Arthur Ashe of Miami declined immediate comment. "I'll have to talk to Chrissie first," he said.

Meanwhile, Miss Evert, No. 2 seed Mrs. Cawley and No. 3 seed Virginia Wade of Britain won third-round victories Thursday on sun-baked courts and in temperatures reaching 104 degrees.

Mrs. Cawley beat Corinne Molesworth of Britain 6-1, 6-1 and Miss Wade defeated Peggy Michel of Pacific Palisades, Calif., 6-3, 6-3. Fourth-seeded Martina Navratilova, the former Czech now living in Beverly Hills., Calif., beat Lea Antonoplis of Glendora, Calif., 6-1, 6-1.

The first seeded player to fall was Tom Okker of The etherlands, beaten 6-4, 8-6, 6-4 by Australia's Phil Dent. Okker was the No. 9 seed.

Godwin moves into tie for 1st in Mo. Amateur

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — Jim Holtgrieve of St. Louis led the field going into the 1976 Missouri Men's State Amateur Tournament play Thursday, but by the end of the day he had to share the qualifying medal with two others.

Former champion Luther Godwin of Poplar Bluff and David Brookreson of St Louis shot 74s Thursday, to join Holtgrieve in claiming the qualifying medal. After two days of play, all recorded scores of 145.

Holtgrieve's 70 Tuesday was the only sub-par round, but he soared Thursday to 75. Heavy rains Wednesday soaked the par-71 course.

The low 32 scorers entered the first round of match play this morning. St.

Bill Landis, Jefferson City, Tom Gossen, Sikeston; Jim Ruck, St. Louis; Jim Whitfield, Branson; Leonard Leimbach, St. Joseph; Jim Jackson, St. Louis; Brian Boudria, Jefferson City; Stewart Shockley, Kansas City; James Rollins, Columbia; Don Bliss, St. Louis; Nicholas Hahn, Kansas City; Dennis Kay, Kansas City; Dick Landon, Kansas City.

Bill Baraban, St. Louis; James Archer, Kansas City, and Bob Enger, Kansas City.

The quarter-finals and semi-finals will be played Saturday. The championship 36-hole round is scheduled for Sunday.

Player Periscope

Steve Coulson of Fisk and Galen McSpadden of Puxico improved on their Minor League play since the last time Player Periscope reported but Gary Blaylock of Malden lowered his batting average.

McSpadden won the only decision he was involved in pitching seven innings. His season ERA is now 2.94 for Amarillo.

Blaylock collected only seven hits in 37 trips to the plate for a .189 average and is now batting only .214 for Jacksonville.

Coulson had a good week at the plate, batting .438 with 7-for-16 for West Haven.

SeMo's only big leaguer, Mark Littell of Gideon, was tagged for seven runs in two innings in his only starting assignment of the season for the Kansas City Royals. Mark's ERA ballooned to 2.79, while his won-loss mark dropped to 3-2.

BOAT CAMPER'S CHECKLIST

Almost everyone likes to go boat camping, but as often happens it's sometimes difficult to get your crew busy gathering the necessary gear and stowing it in the boat.

Experienced campers have found there's nothing that beats a definitive checklist for arousing interest in pre-trip chores. And a list of things to be packed insures your taking all the necessary items for a pleasant outing.

In addition to being a pre-trip guide, a checklist solves the continual problem of what to take and where to put it. From the beginning, the checklist spells out what is essential to the trip, and makes it easy to leave behind extra gear which you probably don't have room for anyway.

After years of experience, the outdoor recreation staff at Mercury outboards has prepared the following checklist which serves them as a guide. Although it may not contain exactly what you need, it does offer a minimum listing of items essential to successful boat camping:

KITCHEN

PERSONAL

Bath towel; toilet kit; toilet tissue; extra clothing; and rain gear.

SHELTER

BOAT

OTHER

Folding chairs; shovel; axe; extra line; flashlight; extra batteries/bulb; and lantern.

Texas hands Royals 6th straight loss; now 2 out

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — The Texas Rangers have suddenly found themselves a patsy who fortunately happens to be their No. 1 rival in the American League West Division.

The Rangers took advantage of clutch pitching by veterans Steve Hargan and Joe Hoerner and Kansas City mental lapses to rip the Royals 5-2 Thursday night and move within two games of them in the hottest chase in baseball.

"They have beat the hell out of us for two years, but now our guys feel they can be had," said Rangers Manager Frank Lucchesi.

The crippled Royals have dropped six consecutive games and have lost four straight to the Rangers — a team they owned with a 14-4 season record in 1975.

Lucchesi said, "I wish we had them in town for a couple more games, because when a team gets going bad it very often gets worse."

"It should be a very interesting race, but if you think I'm fool enough to predict it will be between Kansas City and Texas, you're crazy. It is way too early in the year for that kind of talk.

"I do have a lot of confidence in my team.... We are kind of a streaky club but that is because we are young. Our veteran pitching staff should help settle the club down."

The Royals turned in a dismal display of base running as they saw three runners thrown out. On the other end of the scale, Texas twice scored runs after the Royals picked off Rangers base runners and then threw the ball away.

Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog was livid in the Royals' dressing room, fuming, "That's the worse game we've played since I've been here. We ran into five outs on the bases and gave them three runs.

"I never thought I'd see these guys play like that. I never imagined we've ever be that bad...."

Herzog concluded, "That was a dandy — the best thing was that nobody else got hurt."

Steve Hargan picked up his second victory in four decisions as he made only his second start of the year. The 39-year-old Hoerner got the last six outs, relying on his fast ball instead of his usual deadly breaking stuff.

Hoerner said, "I never threw them hardly any breaking balls. I was just serving up my 75-mile-an-hour fast ball."

The Rangers victimizwd Kansas City starter Al Fitzmorris, who is now 8-4 for the year.

Hoerner, who has a 1.86 earned run average, said, "The victory is especially sweet because this is the same team that released me in the winter of 1974 and said that I couldn't pitch any more."

Texas built up a 4-0 lead against the Royals and coasted home behind Hoerner's two innings of hitless relief pitching.

Kansas City limped out of town to begin a home stand against California while the Rangers meet Chicago tonight in a doubleheader.

Gaylord Perry, 7-5, and Steve Barr, 1-3, go up against Terry Forster, 1-4, and Ken Brett, 3-1, of the White Sox.

Evert leads WTA's threat to boycott Wimbledon; want equality in pay

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Under the threat of a women's boycott of Wimbledon next year, the All-England Club is expected today to answer demands from Chris Evert and other top women tennis stars for equal pay with the men.

"Percentage-wise, we want equality. And unless we get it next year, we won't come," said Miss Evert, the 21-year-old honey blonde from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and No. 1 seed for the women's title.

This year the men's champion will get $21,875 while the women's champion will get $17,500. There is also less for the other women prize winners.

Miss Evert, president of the Women's Tennis Association, said the WTA was asking its members to sign a form agreeing to boycott Wimbledon in 1976 unless their demands are met.

She declined further comment on the dispute Thursday after leading the women's seeds through to the fourth round by cruising past Lesley Hunt of Australia 6-1, 6-0.

"I shall be meeting the All-England Club and presenting our case Friday morning," she said.

Asked if she ever played or practiced with men, she said: "I used to practice with Jimmy Connors, but that's all. I feel they play so much better than I do, it's unfair to ask them."

Connors, the No. 2 men's singles seed here from Belleville, Ill., and Miss Evert were once engaged but have since drifted apart.

Unconfirmed reports about the women's demands said they also wanted an equal number of entries with the men, who have 128 competitors this year compared to 96 women.

The All-England Club, which stages the 99-year-old tournament, already has an agreement to increase the women's share of the prizes over a period of a few years until parity — at least for the winner — is reached. But Miss Evert and the WTA apparently are dissatisfied with that concession.

The men appeared to have reservations about supporting the protest.

John Newcombe of Australia, president of the Association of Tennis Professionals, said: "Equal money comes down to equal performance and when I have the full facts I think you will find the girls are overpaid."

Defending men's title holder Arthur Ashe of Miami declined immediate comment. "I'll have to talk to Chrissie first," he said.

Meanwhile, Miss Evert, No. 2 seed Mrs. Cawley and No. 3 seed Virginia Wade of Britain won third-round victories Thursday on sun-baked courts and in temperatures reaching 104 degrees.

Mrs. Cawley beat Corinne Molesworth of Britain 6-1, 6-1 and Miss Wade defeated Peggy Michel of Pacific Palisades, Calif., 6-3, 6-3. Fourth-seeded Martina Navratilova, the former Czech now living in Beverly Hills., Calif., beat Lea Antonoplis of Glendora, Calif., 6-1, 6-1.

The first seeded player to fall was Tom Okker of The etherlands, beaten 6-4, 8-6, 6-4 by Australia's Phil Dent. Okker was the No. 9 seed.

Godwin moves into tie for 1st in Mo. Amateur

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — Jim Holtgrieve of St. Louis led the field going into the 1976 Missouri Men's State Amateur Tournament play Thursday, but by the end of the day he had to share the qualifying medal with two others.

Former champion Luther Godwin of Poplar Bluff and David Brookreson of St Louis shot 74s Thursday, to join Holtgrieve in claiming the qualifying medal. After two days of play, all recorded scores of 145.

Holtgrieve's 70 Tuesday was the only sub-par round, but he soared Thursday to 75. Heavy rains Wednesday soaked the par-71 course.

The low 32 scorers entered the first round of match play this morning. St.

Bill Landis, Jefferson City, Tom Gossen, Sikeston; Jim Ruck, St. Louis; Jim Whitfield, Branson; Leonard Leimbach, St. Joseph; Jim Jackson, St. Louis; Brian Boudria, Jefferson City; Stewart Shockley, Kansas City; James Rollins, Columbia; Don Bliss, St. Louis; Nicholas Hahn, Kansas City; Dennis Kay, Kansas City; Dick Landon, Kansas City.

Bill Baraban, St. Louis; James Archer, Kansas City, and Bob Enger, Kansas City.

The quarter-finals and semi-finals will be played Saturday. The championship 36-hole round is scheduled for Sunday.

Player Periscope

Steve Coulson of Fisk and Galen McSpadden of Puxico improved on their Minor League play since the last time Player Periscope reported but Gary Blaylock of Malden lowered his batting average.

McSpadden won the only decision he was involved in pitching seven innings. His season ERA is now 2.94 for Amarillo.

Blaylock collected only seven hits in 37 trips to the plate for a .189 average and is now batting only .214 for Jacksonville.

Coulson had a good week at the plate, batting .438 with 7-for-16 for West Haven.

SeMo's only big leaguer, Mark Littell of Gideon, was tagged for seven runs in two innings in his only starting assignment of the season for the Kansas City Royals. Mark's ERA ballooned to 2.79, while his won-loss mark dropped to 3-2.

BOAT CAMPER'S CHECKLIST

Almost everyone likes to go boat camping, but as often happens it's sometimes difficult to get your crew busy gathering the necessary gear and stowing it in the boat.

Experienced campers have found there's nothing that beats a definitive checklist for arousing interest in pre-trip chores. And a list of things to be packed insures your taking all the necessary items for a pleasant outing.

In addition to being a pre-trip guide, a checklist solves the continual problem of what to take and where to put it. From the beginning, the checklist spells out what is essential to the trip, and makes it easy to leave behind extra gear which you probably don't have room for anyway.

After years of experience, the outdoor recreation staff at Mercury outboards has prepared the following checklist which serves them as a guide. Although it may not contain exactly what you need, it does offer a minimum listing of items essential to successful boat camping:

KITCHEN

PERSONAL
Bath towel; toilet kit; toilet tissue; extra clothing; and rain gear.

SHELTER

BOAT

OTHER
Folding chairs; shovel; axe; extra line; flashlight; extra batteries/bulb; and lantern.

Local July 4th Celebrations

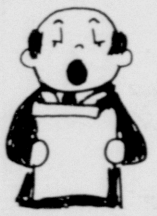
Many kids will be taking part in parades this July 4th.

Cities and towns will be holding their own Bicentennial celebrations. Some of these celebrations will be tied in with a national program that plans how the whole country could celebrate The Fourth.

Tribute to the flag — Congress has set up a 21-day period for honoring and paying a special tribute to the flag. It runs from Flag Day, June 14, through Independence Day, Sunday, July 4.

Period of Religious Services and Prayer — sunrise to noon. Freedom of religion or a chance to choose no religion at all has always been one of the rights carefully protected by all Americans.



Reading of the Declaration of Independence — 10 a.m. through early afternoon. One reading will take place in Philadelphia at Independence Hall. Local TV and radio stations also will carry readings.

Period of Bell Ringing — Bells across the nation will peal at 2 p.m. Eastern Daylight Savings Time.

Time Capsule Programs — During the Bicentennial Weekend all 50 states will be placing documents and souvenirs of 1976 into capsules so that citizens of 2076 will have an understanding of how we celebrated our country's 200th birthday.

A Few Plans for the Fourth!

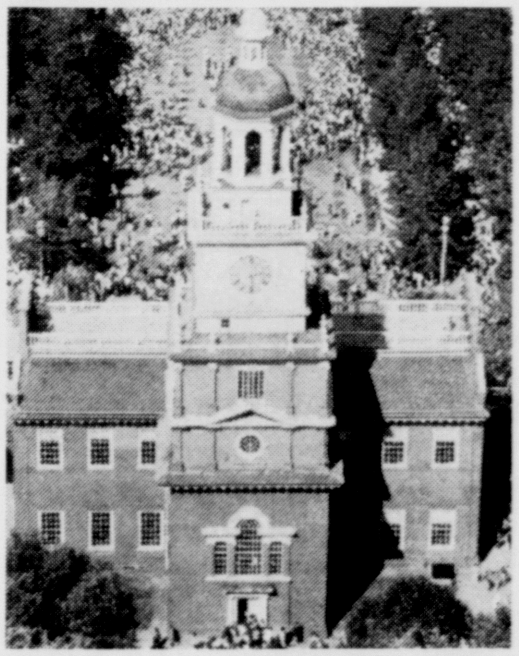
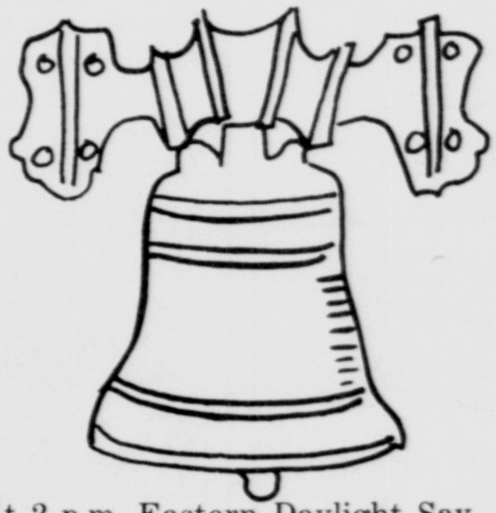
After traveling many miles across the country, along many original pioneer trails and wagon routes, the Bicentennial Wagon Train will end its journey at Valley Forge, Pennsylvania. A train of covered wagons, one from each state, will camp at this site for two months. The Bicentennial Commission of Pennsylvania gave each state a wagon. When the show is over, the wagons will be returned to the states as souvenirs.



The traditional Independence Day ceremonies will be held at Independence Hall in Philadelphia. President Ford will be the speaker. Governors and congresspersons will attend.



At 2 p.m. Eastern Daylight Savings time, the Liberty Bell will be rung in a ceremony in Philadelphia. Since it is cracked and cannot be struck, the peal of the bell will be amplified through electricity. At the same time, schools, churches, fire departments and citizens at home will join in a nationwide bell ringing that will last for two minutes.

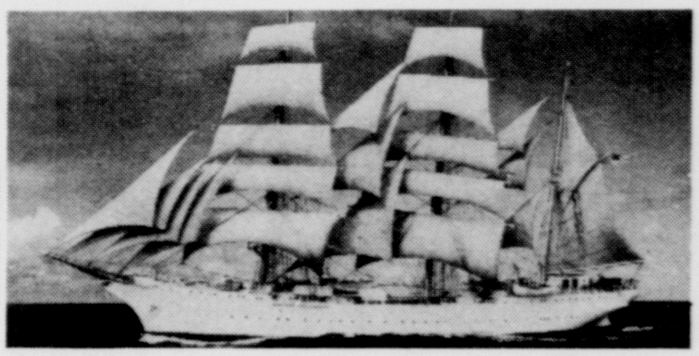
Philadelphia is one of many cities planning a parade. Their "Parade of States" will last for six hours and will include units from each state. The parade will be reviewed by governors from the 50 states.



U.S. Coast Guard Photo

New York Harbor will host "Operation Sail" one of the largest groups of square-rigged ships ever assembled. A marine parade of more than 200 sailing ships will gather and sail through the harbor. Ships from other countries will take part. People will watch from bridges and boats.

Many tourists will be visiting the brand-new National Air and Space Museum which just opened in Washington, D.C. It is four blocks long, six stories high and took four years to build. Space scientists also hope they can celebrate The Fourth with the landing of an unmanned spacecraft on Mars.

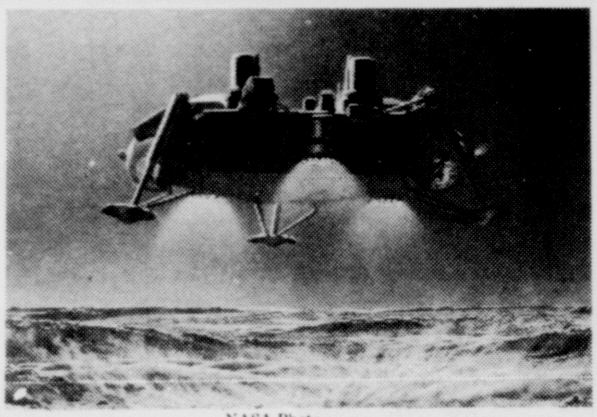
The Viking Mission to Mars



NASA Photo

The Viking spacecraft lander will touchdown on three spring-loaded footpads. This is an artist's drawing of how the landing might look.

If all goes as planned, NASA (the National Aeronautics and Space Administration) hopes that two Viking spacecraft will soon land on Mars.

The landers will relay information and pictures back to earth. The cameras will be able to see detail about as well as a human being standing on Mars.

Is there any form of life on Mars? Is there any water on Mars? These are two of the mysteries the Viking mission hopes to solve.

Safely Celebrating with a Bang!

Last year, during July, 2,600 people with injuries from fireworks were treated in emergency rooms. Here are some tips on fireworks safety.

1. If a fuse burns down and stops burning, never try to relight it.
2. Read instructions carefully. Some boxes are marked: DANGER, NOT TO BE FIRED BY KIDS 14 AND UNDER.
3. Fireworks should always be lit out-of-doors.
4. Sparklers can be dangerous. They can get as hot as 1,200 degrees Fahrenheit. Do not touch them while they are burning. Do not get them near clothes or furniture.
5. Firecrackers that shoot flames or discharge objects should be treated cautiously and never pointed in anyone's direction.
6. Adults should have a blanket handy just in case someone's clothes catch fire.

FIREWORKS CAN BE PRETTY—DANGEROUS!

PAGE 1. Using a United States map, have the children find the cities mentioned in the story. Discuss the fact that there are four different time zones in the country. People on the West Coast will be ringing their bells three hours earlier in order to make all bells across the nation ring at the same time.

PAGE 2. THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE — Find a copy of the Declaration of Independence and have the whole family sign their name at the bottom. Keep it in a safe place to pass on to your grandchildren.

PAGE 3. Nationwide July 4th Celebrations — Discuss how people in your city are planning to celebrate The Fourth. Talk about what your family's plans will be. Make out a schedule of what your family is going to be doing on the Fourth. Have the children keep a copy to show their children years from now.

PAGE 4. Safely Celebrating with a Bang — Discuss fireworks safety. Warn the children of the dangers they and their friends face when playing with firecrackers.

The Declaration of Independence

A Philadelphia newspaper printed the Declaration.

The delegates thought long and hard before they decided to draft the Declaration. If their cause failed, they could have been shot for treason. The last words read: "We pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes and our Sacred Honor." Many colonists were still loyal to the king. It took strong leadership to keep mobs from taking over the country.

The Declaration of Independence was adopted on July 4, 1776. There was an official signing of the "birth certificate" of our country on August 2. The signers' names were kept secret for a time.

The Declaration can be divided into four parts.

The first part is the introduction. This is called the "Preamble." The Declaration begins: "When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for people to dissolve the political bonds . . ."

The second part gives the 27 reasons why the colonists wanted to be independent from Great Britain.

The third part sets up the idea for the new government. It states that "all men are created equal . . . with certain inalienable rights (those no one can take away) among them life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

The fourth part is a declaration of war.

The Declaration has survived much handling, moving and hard use. For many years it was rolled up in a scroll. At one time, it was put on display in bright sunlight where it faded. Today, it is under a special glass that filters out the light. It is under constant guard at the National Archives building in Washington, D.C. Each night it is lowered into a steel and concrete vault below.

The Viking spacecraft lander will touchdown on three spring-loaded footpads. This is an artist's drawing of how the landing might look.

If all goes as planned, NASA (the National Aeronautics and Space Administration) hopes that two Viking spacecraft will soon land on Mars.

The landers will relay information and pictures back to earth. The cameras will be able to see detail about as well as a human being standing on Mars.

Is there any form of life on Mars? Is there any water on Mars? These are two of the mysteries the Viking mission hopes to solve.

What's the Problem?

Safely Celebrating with a Bang!

Last year, during July, 2,600 people with injuries from fireworks were treated in emergency rooms. Here are some tips on fireworks safety.

1. If a fuse burns down and stops burning, never try to relight it.
2. Read instructions carefully. Some boxes are marked: DANGER, NOT TO BE FIRED BY KIDS 14 AND UNDER.
3. Fireworks should always be lit out-of-doors.
4. Sparklers can be dangerous. They can get as hot as 1,200 degrees Fahrenheit. Do not touch them while they are burning. Do not get them near clothes or furniture.
5. Firecrackers that shoot flames or discharge objects should be treated cautiously and never pointed in anyone's direction.
6. Adults should have a blanket handy just in case someone's clothes catch fire.

FIREWORKS CAN BE PRETTY—DANGEROUS!

For Parents 'n Teachers

This section of The Mini Page is especially designed for parents and teachers to use with this week's Mini Page.

PAGE 1. Using a United States map, have the children find the cities mentioned in the story. Discuss the fact that there are four different time zones in the country. People on the West Coast will be ringing their bells three hours earlier in order to make all bells across the nation ring at the same time.

PAGE 2. THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE — Find a copy of the Declaration of Independence and have the whole family sign their name at the bottom. Keep it in a safe place to pass on to your grandchildren.

PAGE 3. Nationwide July 4th Celebrations — Discuss how people in your city are planning to celebrate The Fourth. Talk about what your family's plans will be. Make out a schedule of what your family is going to be doing on the Fourth. Have the children keep a copy to show their children years from now.

The Declaration of Independence

A Philadelphia newspaper printed the Declaration.

The delegates thought long and hard before they decided to draft the Declaration. If their cause failed, they could have been shot for treason. The last words read: "We pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes and our Sacred Honor." Many colonists were still loyal to the king. It took strong leadership to keep mobs from taking over the country.

The Declaration of Independence was adopted on July 4, 1776. There was an official signing of the "birth certificate" of our country on August 2. The signers' names were kept secret for a time.

The Declaration can be divided into four parts.

The first part is the introduction. This is called the "Preamble." The Declaration begins: "When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for people to dissolve the political bonds . . ."

The second part gives the 27 reasons why the colonists wanted to be independent from Great Britain.

The third part sets up the idea for the new government. It states that "all men are created equal . . . with certain inalienable rights (those no one can take away) among them life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

The fourth part is a declaration of war.

Role of 'The Ladies' In U.S. History Shown

PLYMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — Following its premiere three-month showing here starting June 30, an exhibition that examines the role of women during a dramatic period in American history will be on view through 1977 in a number of cities across the nation.

"...Remember the Ladies...Women in America 1750-1815" provides an overview of the domestic life and fluctuating status of all American women — society women, working women, American Indian women, slaves and indentured servants — from the Revolution to the height of the Republican Era.

Many of its documents, artifacts and works of art, on loan from private collections, museum and historical societies, will be on national view for the first time, according to Conover Hunt, a noted American curator who organized the show, jointly sponsored by Clairol and Philip Morris Inc.

"The exhibition is a rediscovery of the diverse role played by women during the era of American independence, a story largely ignored, suppressed or forgotten today," says Miss Hunt, former director of the DAR Museum in Washington, whose search for material took her to 110 museums and private collections.

"In the middle of the 18th century, American women had achieved a status they would not regain until our own time," she adds. "But from 1750 to 1815, the status of women declined sharply. Upper class women of the early 19th century withdrew from economic and political life, opting for domesticity and dependence."

For all others, including slaves and Indian women, freedom and opportunity became more elusive. In the process, the very real and substantial role of women in the creation of American independence was literally forgotten. The written history of the period not only diminished women's role; it all but obliterated it.

The exhibition fills in that gap in our nation's history by providing a well rounded view of our "founding women" and revealing far greater levels of heroism, influence and achievement than standard history has ever recognized, Miss Hunt points out.

Its highlights include: the lives of Revolutionary-era women, some of whom made guns as well as flags, became expert spies, scouts and smugglers of supplies for the Continental Army and, in some cases, fought as soldiers in the cause of independence.

Also the prose and polemics of Mercy Otis Warren, a major influence on the leaders and events that shaped early U.S. history, and the story of the internationally acclaimed slave poet Phillis Wheatley.

There are displays, including her cookbook, concerning the outspoken Abigail Adams, whose entreaty to her husband John to "remember the ladies" in the writing of the Constitution — which he shrugged off — gives the exhibition its title.

Included in the wide-ranging collection gathered by Miss Hunt are an exceptional selection of women's paintings and needlework; a wealth of period costumes, furnishings, engravings and portraits; Dolley Madison's turban, and a first edition of Miss Warren's "History of the American Revolution" with her notations.

After its initial showing at the Pilgrim Hall and Plymouth Antiquarian Society here the exhibition will travel to The High Museum of Art, Atlanta, Oct. 16-Nov. 14; Corcoran Gallery of Art, Washington, D.C., Dec. 3-Dec. 31; Chicago Historical Society, Chicago, Jan. 18-Feb. 20, 1977; Lyndon Baines Johnson Library, Austin, Tex., March 15-April 23, 1977; and New York Historical Society, New York, May 10-June 15, 1977.

A SOCIETY of PATRIOTIC LADIES, at EDENTON in NORTH CAROLINA

THIS ENGLISH political cartoon satirizes the occasion on Oct. 25, 1774, when 51 of the leading women of the Albemarle region of North Carolina gathered at Edenton and drew up a resolution boycotting use of "East India tea" as a token of support for the American cause. The cartoon is from the exhibition, "...Remember the Ladies...Women in America 1750-1815," which will tour the country after its initial showing in Plymouth, Mass. Role of 'The Ladies' In U.S. History Shown

PLYMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — Following its premiere three-month showing here starting June 30, an exhibition that examines the role of women during a dramatic period in American history will be on view through 1977 in a number of cities across the nation.

"...Remember the Ladies...Women in America 1750-1815" provides an overview of the domestic life and fluctuating status of all American women — society women, working women, American Indian women, slaves and indentured servants — from the Revolution to the height of the Republican Era.

Many of its documents, artifacts and works of art, on loan from private collections, museum and historical societies, will be on national view for the first time, according to Conover Hunt, a noted American curator who organized the show, jointly sponsored by Clairol and Philip Morris Inc.

"The exhibition is a rediscovery of the diverse role played by women during the era of American independence, a story largely ignored, suppressed or forgotten today," says Miss Hunt, former director of the DAR Museum in Washington, whose search for material took her to 110 museums and private collections.

"In the middle of the 18th century, American women had achieved a status they would not regain until our own time," she adds. "But from 1750 to 1815, the status of women declined sharply. For all others, including slaves and Indian women, freedom and opportunity became more elusive. In the process, the very real and substantial role of women in the creation of American independence was literally forgotten. The written history of the period not only diminished women's role; it all but obliterated it.

The exhibition fills in that gap in our nation's history by providing a well rounded view of our "founding women" and revealing far greater levels of heroism, influence and achievement than standard history has ever recognized, Miss Hunt points out.

Its highlights include: the lives of Revolutionary-era women, some of whom made guns as well as flags, became expert spies, scouts and smugglers of supplies for the Continental Army and, in some cases, fought as soldiers in the cause of independence.

Also the prose and polemics of Mercy Otis Warren, a major influence on the leaders and events that shaped early U.S. history, and the story of the internationally acclaimed slave poet Phillis Wheatley.

There are displays, including her cookbook, concerning the outspoken Abigail Adams, whose entreaty to her husband John to "remember the ladies" in the writing of the Constitution — which he shrugged off — gives the exhibition its title.

Included in the wide-ranging collection gathered by Miss Hunt are an exceptional selection of women's paintings and needlework; a wealth of period costumes, furnishings, engravings and portraits; Dolley Madison's turban, and a first edition of Miss Warren's "History of the American Revolution" with her notations.

After its initial showing at the Pilgrim Hall and Plymouth Antiquarian Society here the exhibition will travel to The High Museum of Art, Atlanta, Oct. 16-Nov. 14; Corcoran Gallery of Art, Washington, D.C., Dec. 3-Dec. 31; Chicago Historical Society, Chicago, Jan. 18-Feb. 20, 1977; Lyndon Baines Johnson Library, Austin, Tex., March 15-April 23, 1977; and New York Historical Society, New York, May 10-June 15, 1977.

"I can recommend Navy training. I've seen it first hand."

—James B. Bishop, Guidance Counselor, S.E. Polk Community High School, Runnells, Iowa

What do guidance counselors recommend to young people who still aren't sure what they're looking for? Who may need time to mature or find themselves? James Bishop often recommends the Navy.

"We have an active vocational training program at our school," said Mr. Bishop, "but Navy training looked exceptionally advanced to me. Now that I've seen what the Navy can do, I can recommend it with confidence."

High school graduates who qualify for today's Navy can make a choice from over 70 challenging opportunities. From aviation mechanics to computers. Training that can start them on their way to a lifelong career.

MR. PROPST SAYS!

There is nothing made on earth but what some man will try to cheapen it a bit and to sell it for less.

WE AT PROPST BELIEVE,

Quality for Quality our prices are fair and reasonable.

An important consideration is the service you will get at the time of the sale and continue to get long afterwards. Prize quality is remembered long after price is forgotten.

The Daily Standard's

6th Annual Cookbook

June 25, 1976

Editor's note

I myself have had the opportunity of watching only one "gourmet cook" in action, in my home state of Iowa. He was a charming German man who whipped up all sorts of concoctions with little trouble and, to my amazement, little precise measuring.

"How much lemon juice was that?" I would ask, pen poised to write down each ingredient.

"Oh, about a dash," Stephan would say.

So maybe our ancestors, who measured with dashes, pinches and tizzies, were as successful as those who prefer exact measurements.

And of course, the all-important ingredient, a desire to please ourselves and others, is one which every truly good cook knows well.

I want to thank all of our contributing Bootheel cooks who have generously shared their better recipes with others. A special thanks also to our advertisers and The Daily standard reporters who wrote the features for our sixth annual Cookbook.

Happy reading, cooking and eating.

Lala Duke, queen of bakers

By SHIRLEY PRITCHETT

EAST PRAIRIE — "I love to cook everything, but if I had to select a favorite method, I'd choose baking," Mrs. Lala Duke, a busy wife, mother and homemaker of the Dogwood Community, replied in answer to the question, "What do you like to cook best?"

Employed in the bookkeeping department of Citizens Bank of Charleston, for the past eight months she has taken on an additional job — a labor of love — baking cakes and pies for friends to assist her daughter, Phyllis, 16, in raising the needed funds to tour Europe this summer with other members of East Prairie High School's choir.

"I've baked at least 200 cakes and pies since November. In fact, I had 20 cakes to get out in one week", she said. German chocolate and carrot cakes, plus coconut cream and chocolate pies have been her most ordered bakery goods. Besides the special orders called in, she has also baked quite a number of items for bake sales the students have held.

Phyllis, a junior, will be touring five European countries, Germany, Switzerland, France, Holland and Beligum, with six other local students and their choir director, Mrs. Nancy Bird.

The group has already held an auction, bake sales and a chili dinner. A spaghetti supper and flea market is planned for the near future and Mrs. Duke will again be called on to supply baked goods.

Mrs. Duke says her daughter has also been "helping her cause", by bottle feeding six calves, twice a day, which were given to her by Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Heath. Private donations have also come in to help each student raise the needed $1,000 for the trip.

"When I try a new recipe, I study it out carefully and always follow a recipe to the letter," she says, adding that she has cooked long enough to know how to season in regular cooking. The recipe for carrot cake, she knows by heart.

Another tip to the "beginner cook" — plan ahead, have and keep all ingredients on hand.

Since her new "career" opened up, Mrs. Duke said she has become a "bargain hunter", stocking up on sale items, such as powdered sugar, sugar and margarine, things which can be frozen or will keep for some time.

Mealtime at the Duke residence always finds something "sweet", a requirement of her husband, H. W. Duke, who manages and is part owner of Dogwood Store and Oil Co.

The Duke family also includes Keith, 19, who farms and lives at home, Phyllis, and Jim and his family, LaDonna and Natalie, age 2, who live in East Prairie.

Active in the Dogwood United Methodist Church, Mrs. Duke teaches a junior department Sunday School class, sings in the choir, and often presents special music with her daughter.

During recent remodeling at her home, Mrs. Duke had a double oven installed, the better to keep up with her baking orders. "I've been up as late as 2 a.m. and have gotten up at 4 a.m. on occasion to get out my orders," she said, crediting word-of-mouth advertising for her success.

Always anxious to try a new recipe, Mrs. Duke said she collects cookbooks and now has at least 15, some collected at places she has visited.

In addition to her other "chores," she raises a garden each summer, canning or freezing the fresh vegetables. A delicious recipe for bread and butter pickles is included in her favorite recipes she is sharing with Daily Standard readers.

Prepared from "scratch", her cakes are light and mouth-watering delicious. If your "sweet tooth" needs to be filled, give her a call, you're in for a treat!

Mrs. Duke's contributions to The Daily Standard's cookbook edition include several of her most popular cakes in addition to some of her own family's favorite desserts.

Baking has become a way of life and one in which Mrs. H. W. Duke of the Dogwood Community finds pleasure and a sense of satisfaction. Patience is a necessity in baking from scratch, something Mrs. Duke, shown here frosting a white chocolate cake, has developed particularly in the past eight months.

Sugar 'n spice...

1½ cups sugar
½ cup shortening
2 eggs
1 cup coconut milk — whole milk can be used
2 cups flour
2 tsps. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt
1 cup grated fresh coconut.

Mix well and bake in 2x9 inch pans in 350 degree oven.

FILLING

1¼ tbsp flour
¼ cup milk
¼ cup margarine
¼ cup sugar
¼ tsp. vanilla
½ cup grated fresh coconut
½ to 1 cup powdered sugar
pinch salt

Blend flour and milk and cook over low heat until mixture is like thick paste. Cool. Cream margarine and sugar, add cooked flour mixture and blend well. Add grated coconut, vanilla, salt and powdered sugar. Mix well. Spread between cooled cake layers and then frost with fluffy white icing.

GELLATIN CAKE

1 package yellow cake mix
4 eggs
1 package orange gellatin
¾ cup vegetable oil

Mix above ingredients. Bake in 250 degree oven for one hour. Cake will fall and look awful — do not be alarmed.

FROSTING

Mix 2 cups powdered sugar and ¼ cup orange juice. Pour over cake while hot.

CHOCOLATE PIE
(Makes two)

3 cups sugar
6 tbsp. coca
6 egg yellows
1 stick butter
3 cups milk (1½ cups evaporated, 1½ cups milk)

Cook until mixture thickens, add level teaspoon vanilla. Pour into baked pie shell and top with meringue.

BREAD AND BUTTER PICKLES

6 medium white onions sliced
2 green peppers chopped
3 cloves garlic or garlic powder
One-third cup salt.

Mix well — cover with ice water and let stand three hours, then drain well.

Combine:
5 cups sugar
3 cups vinegar
1½ tsp. tumerice
1½ tsp. celery seed
2 tbsps. mustard seed

Mix well and pour over cucumber mixture. Heat to a boil or until green has left cucumbers. Seal in sterilized jars.

MILLION DOLLAR PIE

1 can condensed milk
¼ cup fresh lemon juice
1 large box non-dairy whipped topping

Mix and add:
1 small can crushed pineapple
1 can coconut
¾ cups nuts

Mix, pour into baked pie shell and chill.

Bran scrapple

Really delicious way to add fiber to a dish.

½ pound bulk pork sausage
1 cup water
1-3rd cup yellow cornmeal
1-3rd cup whole bran cereal

In a heavy skillet cook and brown sausage, crumbling with a fork. Drain sausage; refrigerate fat for later use. In a small saucepan bring the water to a boil; gradually stir in the cornmeal; continue stirring over low heat as it bubbles and thickens until it is as thick as mush. Off heat, stir in the sausage and bran, mixing thoroughly. Turn into a small loaf pan (5¾ by 3¼ by 2¼ inches) that has been rinsed with cold water. Chill. At serving time, loosen edges and unmold. Cut into 8 crosswise slices. Heat some of the saved sausage fat in a heavy 9-or 10-inch skillet; add the scrapple slices and brown quickly on both sides. Serve with maple syrup. Makes 2 good-size servings.

Kitchen tips to save energy

If your oven has a self-cleaning mechanism, plan to use it after the oven's already warm from use in cooking. That will save energy needed to raise the temperature to the cleaning temperature.

To keep fresh vegetables such as lettuce, cucumbers and bell peppers crisp, wash and drain them, wrap in paper towels and put into plastic bread wrappers in order to retain their moisture while in the refrigerator.

Uniform grade names for fruits, vegetables

To make U. S. grades for fresh fruits and vegetables more useful to consumers and marketers, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has adopted a policy for establishing uniform grades names for these products.

Effective July 1, the terms U. S. Fancy, U. S. No. 1, U. S. No. 2, and U. S. No. 3 will be the grade names used in establishing or revising grade standards for fresh fruit and vegetables and nuts. The grade names will be adopted in the normal process of revision or establishing standards for individual products.

USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS), which develops grade standards for food and farm products, proposed the uniform grade nomenclature for fresh fruits and vegetables in the Oct. 6, 1975 Federal Register.

Under the new policy, the grade names represent the following levels of quality:

U.S. Fancy- Premium quality; covers only the top quality produced.

U.S. No. 2-- Intermediate between U. S. No. 1 and U. S. No. 3; noticeably superior to U. S. No. 3.

U. S. No. 3 – the lowest merchantable quality practical to pack under normal conditions.

AMS officials explained that consumers are not likely to see immediate results of the new policy because few fresh fruits and vegetables are labeled by grade in retail stores. Use of the U. S. grade standards and official grading services is voluntary, and grade labeling is not required by Federal law.

Floyd F. Hedlund, director of AMS' fruit and vegetable division, said the new policy for uniform nomenclature is the same as that proposed except that raw products for processing are excluded and requests for minor revisions in grade standards will not necessarily trigger the requirement to revise grade names of a commodity.

Standards for raw products for processing, which are entirely separate from those e established for fruits and vegetables for the fresh market, are excluded because these standards are used exclusively in contracts between growers and processors of canned, frozen, or other processed products.

A total of 224 comments were received and considered in adopting the proposal. The majority of the comments came from consumers and most supported the proposal. The consensus opinion was that adoption of uniform grade names would help consumers select the quality of fruits or vegetables they desired.

Those opposing the proposal said that changing long-established grade names would hinder marketing, or that the grade names were not of use to consumers. Some comments expressed the desire to eliminate U.S. Fancy as the premium grade and have U.S. No. 1 as the top grade, saying this would reduce confusion.

Uniform grade names for fruits, vegetables

To make U. S. grades for fresh fruits and vegetables more useful to consumers and marketers, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has adopted a policy for establishing uniform grades names for these products.

Effective July 1, the terms U. S. Fancy, U. S. No. 1, U. S. No. 2, and U. S. No. 3 will be the grade names used in establishing or revising grade standards for fresh fruit and vegetables and nuts. The grade names will be adopted in the normal process of revision or establishing standards for individual products.

USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS), which develops grade standards for food and farm products, proposed the uniform grade nomenclature for fresh fruits and vegetables in the Oct. 6, 1975 Federal Register.

Under the new policy, the grade names represent the following levels of quality:

U.S. Fancy- Premium quality; covers only the top quality produced.

U. S. No. 1-- The chief trading grade; represents good, average quality that is practical to pack under commercial conditions; covers the bulk of the quality range produced.

U.S. No. 2-- Intermediate between U. S. No. 1 and U. S. No. 3; noticeably superior to U. S. No. 3.

U. S. No. 3 – the lowest merchantable quality practical to pack under normal conditions.

AMS officials explained that consumers are not likely to see immediate results of the new policy because few fresh fruits and vegetables are labeled by grade in retail stores. Use of the U. S. grade standards and official grading services is voluntary, and grade labeling is not required by Federal law.

Floyd F. Hedlund, director of AMS' fruit and vegetable division, said the new policy for uniform nomenclature is the same as that proposed except that raw products for processing are excluded and requests for minor revisions in grade standards will not necessarily trigger the requirement to revise grade names of a commodity.

Standards for raw products for processing, which are entirely separate from those e established for fruits and vegetables for the fresh market, are excluded because these standards are used exclusively in contracts between growers and processors of canned, frozen, or other processed products.

A total of 224 comments were received and considered in adopting the proposal. The majority of the comments came from consumers and most supported the proposal. The consensus opinion was that adoption of uniform grade names would help consumers select the quality of fruits or vegetables they desired.

Those opposing the proposal said that changing long-established grade names would hinder marketing, or that the grade names were not of use to consumers. Some comments expressed the desire to eliminate U.S. Fancy as the premium grade and have U.S. No. 1 as the top grade, saying this would reduce confusion.

The policy for uniform grade nomenclature for fresh fruits and vegetables was scheduled for publication in the May 25 Federal Register... Copies may be obtained from the Fruit and Vegetable Division, AMS, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Special cakes for Bicentennial

WASHINGTON, D.C. — It is the usual thing to do for a birthday party — to bake a cake. But when it is a very special birthday, like the 200th birthday of a nation, cake bakers outdo themselves in concocting the biggest, the best, the most creative cakes they can make. Bakers around the country are doing just that for America's birthday party this July Fourth weekend.

The biggest, the real superstar of Bicentennial birthday cakes, will be displayed July 3 in Philadelphia's Memorial Hall in Fairmount Park. The five-story- high chocolate cake will be 42 feet across at the base and will weigh in at 49,000 pounds.

Produced and donated by the Kitchens of Sara Lee, supersized layers will be baked, assembled and frosted in the company's New Hampton, IA. plant. Decorations, designed at company headquarters in Deerfield, Ill. will be added to the cake at Philadelphia. The cake and decorations will be transported from Deefield to Philadelphia in a five- truck convoy, with stops en route to display the scale mode.

The red, white and blue cake will be decorated with seals of all the states and territories of the United States, as well as 120 historic scenes from the past, and topped by an American eagle.

A team of pastry headed by Cornelius (Casey) Sinkeldam, coach of the U.S. Culinary Olympic team, will decorate the colossal chocolate confection. After the festivities, the cake will be disassembled and donated to charitable institutions in the Philadelphia area.

Bicentennial birthday cakes are a citywide effort in Brownsville, Tex. For the last two years, Brownsville youngsters have been collecting and selling cans to recycling plants in order to raise $1,300 for ingredients. And indeed, it is not ordinary birthday cake that will reward them for their efforts.

Peggy Quellhorst of Tiffany Bakery is baking 200 sheet cakes, each decorated with a scene from American history. The cakes will be displayed as a patchwork quilt, measuring about 12 by 18 feet, in Brownsville's Amigoland Shopping Mall on July Fourth. A replica of Independence Hall will serve as the centerpiece, and at 6:30 p.m. slices of cake will be served free to the public.

The National Archives will cut a red, white and blue birthday cake at the opening ceremony of a unique tribute to the Declaration of Independence, on July 2. The 36- inch dummy base will be decorated with a huge "Happy Birthday." A two-tier butter pound cake baked and decorated by Buddy Byram of Clement's Bakery of Washington, will feature red, white and blue bunting on the second tier and a large "200" on the top tier.

Red, white and blue roses holding American flags will decorate the top of the cake. The archives cake will be cut with an American sword from the Archives' collection and slices will be given to visitors who have filed through the rotunda to view the Declaration of Independence and sign a special guestbook.

At 1:30 p.m. on the Fourth of July the cake will be brought out for serving on the Archives portico, as the U.S. Army Band plays "Happy Birthday."

The Declaration of Independence will be on public view for 76 consecutive hours during the July Fourth Bicentennial Weekend, beginning in the evening of July 2. A military honor guard will stand guard on the Declaration the entire day of July 4.

The Scott County Hospital Ladies Auxiliary will sell slices of cake in Huntsville, Tenn. as part of Scott County's Bicentennial festivities at noon on July 3 at the county courthouse. County Judge Verda Cope will choose the favorite cake in this Bicentennial Weekend cake and cookie baking contest.

The Fantastic Frosters of Great Falls, Montana are also holding a cake baking contest, specifying that the entries be decorated around the theme of the country's 200th birthday. They plan to feed cake to 2,000 people at the state fairgrounds, as part of Montana's biggest Bicentennial Weekend celebration.

Three trophies will be presented to the winners of the individual category and three for commercially baked cakes. At 12:30 on the 4th, the cakes will be judged and at 3 p.m., a fifth grader dressed as Uncle Sam will cut and serve the first prize cake. And, of course, the whole community will sing "Happy Birthday, America."

In Champaign, Ill., the entire population is being invited to b ring a birthday cake to the open area across from the University of Illinois football stadium after the Fourth of July parade. Bicentennial themes are expected to dominate the cake decorations.

The Baltimore Bicentennial Committee is selling 400,000 slices of Bicentennial birthday cake to finance historic restoration projects in the city. A plywood dummy cake in the shape of the continental United States will contain frosted, prewrapped slices of butter pound cake in souvenir Bicentennial boxes.

At midnight on July 3, the 50 x 20 x 8 ft. cake will be floated on a barge from Baltimore's Inner Harbor to Ft. McHenry, where the barge will be doced and 200 electric candles will be lighted. Herman's Bakery in Baltimore has been baking 1,000 pounds of cake per day since the first of June. The frozen cakes are being shipped to Philadelphia for wrapping and packaging, then shipped back for the Bicentennial Weekend celebration in Baltimore.

Whether pretend or real, colossal or cupcake size, commercial or home baked, Bicentennial birthday cakes are one example of the many kinds of tributes present day patriots are paying to the United States of America on its 200th anniversary.

Many plants poisonous

It may be hard to believe, but there are many plants that grow in a peaceful meadow, along a quiet river, or in your own backyard that can be labeled as poison just as one labels a bottle of ammonia or a container of furniture polish.

Included in the more than 700 species of plants in the United States and Canada that are known to cause death or illness are some of nature's most delicate creations: the oleander bush, the lily of the valley, and the rhododendron.

Each year an estimated 12,000 children ingest these plants and others like them. A Seattle study revealed that 10 percent of 100 child poisoning cases observed were of youngsters who had eaten toxic plants, and that in six of these cases, the children's parents had no idea the plants were dangerous.

As a public service, CIBA-GEIGY Corporation has published a booklet entitled, Plants That Poison, which lists plants dangerous to ingest. A leading U.S. chemical company, CIBA-GEIGY creates and manufactures a wide variety of products that make life healthier and more pleasant, including pharmaceuticals, agricultural products, dyestuffs, pigments, plastics and additives and consumer products.

In your garden for example, even the foliage of potatoes and tomatoes contain alkaloid poisons that can, when swallowed, create nervous disorder and stomach upset. Most dangerous of all plants in the vegetable garden is rhubarb. Its stalk, commonly used in baking and cooking is not toxic, but the leaf blade, containing oxalic acid which crystallizes in the kidneys, causes severe damage if a number of leaves are eaten.

It is essential that children and adults understand the dangers involved in ingesting plants which are not cultivated specifically for eating, or only certain parts of which are safe to eat.

If you would like to obtain the booklet Plants That Poison, write to CIBA-GEIGY Corporation, c/o Corporate Relations Dept., Ardsley, N.Y. 10502.

DEXTER — Somewhere in Scott County I was talking with a new acquaintance, a pretty woman, and we were sounding each other out, as strangers do when they meet. She asked me where I was from.

"Dexter," I answered.

"Oh," she said brightly, "that's where they have the good ribs, isn't it?"

Perhaps it is a dubious honor for a city to be known primarily for a single restaurant, but I have met many persons who knew little of Dexter, But knew of the Hickory Log Restaurant.

In this world of fast food chains, the restaurant is somewhat of a rarity, almost an institution that has grown with the city.

Barbara Jones, supervisor of the restaurant, was prepared for my questions recently. She referred to her notes in what had been the original building, now part of a lounge which was put in last year.

"The restaurant was opened April 1, 1950 at its present location by Woody Gaines and Homer Dreden," she said, ticking off the line of owners. "On Nov. 9, 1950 it was sold to Neil Dennison. On Nov. 27, 1951 Earl Webb bought it. He paid $10,000 for it."

At first the Hickory Log was a drive-in- carry out place. Webb started the rib tradition by putting in the first small pit, located at the front of the building near Highway 114.

More than five years after he bought it, Webb sold to Frank Pritchard for $9,000. Pritchard was the one who formulated the secret recipe used at the restaurant. The present owners — Audrey Fralick and John Banken — bought it on May 16, 1967 for $35,000.

They are still using the same method — cooking the meat for hours over outside pits — and the recipe is still secret.

"We don't tell anybody the secret," Mrs. Jones said, but let slip that 10 different spices are used. "We haven't come up to the Colonel yet, I think he has 11," she laughed, referring to a well- known chain of chicken places.

Pritchard died recently. Mrs. Jones didn't know how he came up with the recipe. "Mavbe he had some help from his wife?" she suggested.

Taking me outside to the pits — there are now six of them — she said that the spices were just one part of what went into the final product. The ribs are cooked over a hickory fire; no other wood will do.

Banken added what he felt was another reason for the ribs' fame: they are a special cut shipped directly from Kansas City. Gesturing at boxes of the raw meat stacked neatly, he explained that they tried other places but they couldn't come up with the same quality of ribs.

Mrs. Jones added still another reason: "A restaurant has more employment loyalty," she feels, "they spend so many hours here they want to be connected with something good; when somebody compliments the salad, we try to get it back to them."

Even before you sit down for dinner, the employes have been working for hours on the meal. First the ribs must be trimmed and washed in a vinegar solution before they are ready for the "super-secret receipe."

After the spices are added, the meat goes to the pits where it is allowed to cook for three hours; less if it is a busy night. The first batch of ribs goes on about 6:30 a.m. No artificial means are used in any phase of the cooking.

Even the fires must be started with cardboard boxes, "and if it's wet they just fuss and fuss," Mrs. Jones said. Working in a restaurant is not all peaches and cream, as Bruce Vancil demonstrated.

His job is to watch the pits, check the fire, trying not to let the smoke get in his eyes.

"He does a lot of crying," Mrs. Jones said, as he tried to evade the smoke clutching at him.

And if the fire gets too high the pits can catch on fire in just seconds. A whole pit can burn in minutes.

The restaurant does a thriving business. On weekends there is usually a waiting line of about 20 minutes just to be seated, and about 2.5 tons or ribs are cooked each week. A pit can hold about 25 sides of ribs.

The management claims it is not trying for any particular mood in the place, "just a comfortable, pleasant dining place — to relax and have a good meal," Mrs. Jones said.

The color scheme is predominately black and red: red tablecloths, wooden chairs with black upholstery, lantern-type electric lights on the walls.

The family aspect of the angle is stressed, but the restaurant does offer a wine list. Most persons drink beer with their ribs, but some choose a red wine, Mrs. Jones said.

Sometimes the stress on "family" can result in unexpected problems.

One night it seemed like baby night," Mrs. Jones said. "Every other couple that walked in had a baby. We had to send out for more high chairs."

She added, however, that she was glad to get new customers.

There is no "head chef" at the Hickory Log; both owners take an active interest in the business, with at least one being there at all times.

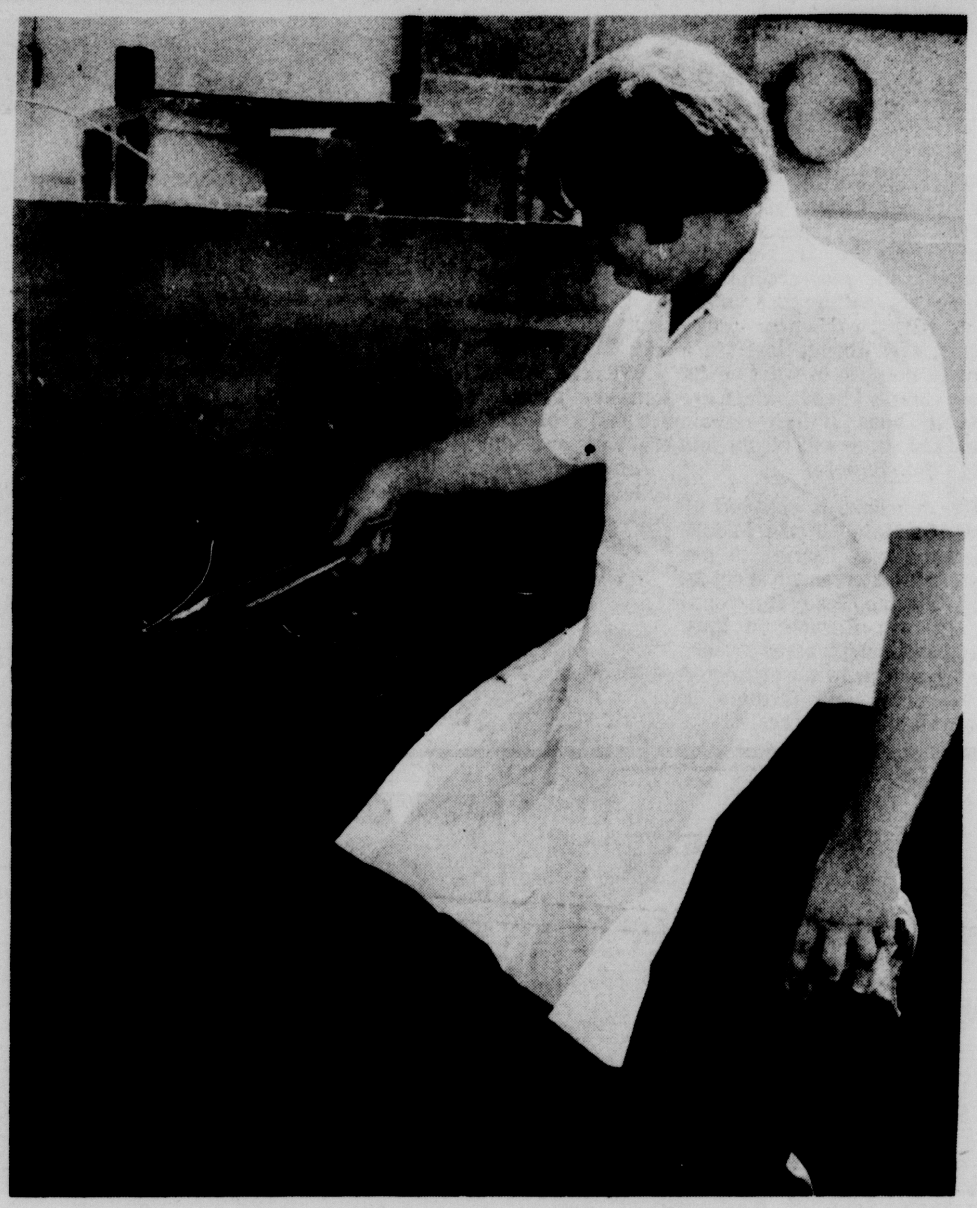
For a long time, the two owners would split their own wood for the pits, but it "got to where we could burn wood faster than we could cut it," Banken said, so he bought a hydraulic wood splitter for that job.

Of the two owners, Fralick had the most experience in the restaurant business, having worked in one as a child and teen-ager. Both he and Banken, however, quit jobs at a car dealership to buy the restaurant.

Banken remembered that Fralick "asked me if I would be interested, so I said I'd give it a try. To me, it's better than the car business."

Mrs. Jones said that many persons compliment the restaurant and the food, but that some do complain at times.

"We need a few complaints to keep us on our toes," Banken responded. "If something is wrong, we ask you to tell the waitress. They'd be happy to correct it right then."



The ribs which the Hickory Log Restaurant in Dexter is noted for are cooked for up to three hours on outside pits like this one, located behind the restaurant. Bruce Vancil here watches the meat, making sure it cooks right and that the fire does not get out of hand.

Artichokes tasty hot or cold

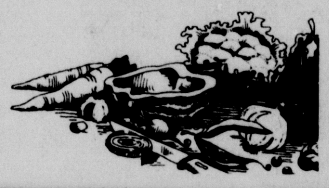
Artichokes once ushered in the spring season and were served only on special occasions. Today they are generally available the year around and people are eating them more and more with their daily meals, even though there is a limited number of ways to fix these compact heads, which are actually buds. If they remain unpicked, they will bloom into large blue flowers.

The artichoke is believed to have originated in the Middle East and was carried to the eastern Mediterranean about 2,000 years ago. Today it is popular all over Europe. In Italy they plant 150,000 acres a year; the French grow an estimated 40,000 acres and farmers in Spain some 30,000 acres.

The citizens of Castroville, Calif., the self-proclaimed artichoke capital of America, do a thriving business with the globular vegetable. They plant about 10,000 acres on their sandy soil and ship them all over the country.

Artichokes have a sweet, somewhat nutty taste, and they are said to be rich in iron, mineral salts and iodine.

Artichokes are usually eaten boiled and are served hot or cold, depending on your taste and the occasion. Each leaf is dipped in melted butter, hollandaise sauce or oil and vinegar. Finally after 50 petals have thus been dispatched the diner reaches the prized heart or choke. This is usually eaten with a fork, after the prickly surface has been scraped away. "Otherwise," one old cookbook warned, "if swallowed, it creates an unpleasant sensation in the throat." You'd better believe it.



When shopping for artichokes, choose those with tightly furled heads. If the leaves have begun to open out, they are over-mature and may be woody in texture.

If you want a change from the boiled variety, here's a recipe for French Fried Artichokes

3 egg yolks, slightly beaten
½ cup milk
¾ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon nutmeg
pepper to taste
dash of tabasco flour
fine dried breadcrumbs
solid all-vegetable shortening for deep fat frying

Wash and drain artichokes. Cut off top half of artichoke and trim stem. Snip off all outer leaves down to pale green ones. Slice artichokes in half, lengthwise. Remove choke and set aside for future use. Cut ¼ inch slices lengthwise. Blend egg yolks, milk and seasonings. Coat artichoke slices with flour, dip into egg mixture then coat with bread crumbs. Drop into skillet or deep fat fryer with shortening preheated to 375 degrees. Fry till golden brown, about 1 minute. Remove with slotted spoon, drain and serve hot, as hors d'oeuvre, or accompaniment to main dish.

American diets are influenced by world

Americans pick and choose their diets from the traditions of the whole world.

Whether it is pumpkin pie or Chinese fried rice, much of our food has a special history and we are the richer for it.

Our food has all sorts of social, geographical and cultural traditions. Baseball and hot dogs, San Francisco and Chinese food, New Orleans and shrimp gumbo, the Southwest and chili are a few of these traditions.

Everyone needs the same nutrients but we can take them as we like them.

Protein is important to us all. If our heritage is Mexican-American, we can get a healthy amount of protein at a low cost in such dishes as refried beans.

Or iron. Jewish women, like all women, have a special need for iron in their diets. Of the many Jewish foods, one of the most popular is a good source of iron, chopped chicken livers.

Families from Puerto Rico need milk as everyone else does.

They get a fair amount of it in cafe con leche or in flan. Hankering for soul food, you may find yourself fixing grits and turnip greens — and when you do you are serving up a large portion of iron, vitamin A, B vitamins and vitamin C.

Every cultural tradition allows for enough good food for people to be helathy as well as happy at the dinner table.

Traditional eating patterns and habits may suffer a change on theirway t o this country, or from farm to city, but the nourishment in the food itself remains the same.

Rice, for example, is a mainstay at Puerto Rican tables; it is just as important when the family moves to New York.

But there are times when the tradition itself changes, catching the homemaker unaware. Older Mexican-Americans like their tortillas made from cornmeal.

Their children often prefer them made from wheat flour, and thus lose out on the calcium that attached itself to the corn in the processing.

For all its people, however, the United States has one of the best food supplies in the world, whether measured in terms of quantity, quality, variety, or availability.

If your diet contains a good variety of foods, whether fresh or packaged, meats and vegetables, milk, cereals and grains, fruits and cheeses in the necessary amounts, good nutrition will take care of itself.

Use cooling dairy foods as your summer menu mainstay, and see how easy it is to put more appetite appeal into every meal . . . with the flavor, freshness and downright goodness of these delicious, healthful foods. Serve dairy products often.

4-H leader shares skills

By NADINE S. TOWNSEND

NEW MADRID — "To turn an ordinary meal into a company dinner, have a hot yeast bread," is the advice Mrs. Pansy Crosby of Parma Route Two gives to 4-H members in her breadmaking classes.

Mrs. Crosby, New Madrid County Extension Youth Assistant of the University of Missouri Extension Division, has been involved in the 4-H program since 1937 when she became a leader of the New Hope 4-H Club. She succeeded her husband Wendell's mother, Mrs. John Crosby, now 87, who was the first leader of the club, which was organized in 1932.

Mrs. Crosby says she was the youngest in a large family and, out of necessity, learned homemaking skills at an early age. She made her first dress at the age of nine. Throughout the past 39 years she has been sharing and teaching those skills to hundreds of youngsters in the county-wide 4-H program.

Fir the first 35 of those 39 years, Mrs. Crosby gave of her time and talent as a volunteer club or project leader in the 4-H program. Four years ago she started her youth assistant job professionally.

Currently there are 23 4-H Clubs in the country with approximately 450 youths involved.

Mrs. Crosby says it seems that breadmaking has almost become a lost art among today's homemakers. Recently, however, there has been a revived interest in learning some of the homemaking skills of the past, she said, probably because of the emphasis on the national Bicentennial.

She has just completed teaching two breakmaking classes, one at Gideon and one at Risco. Girls in the classes ranged from 10 to 16 years, and four mothers participated at Gideon. By teaching the mothers, she hopes to gain a project leader for future classes.

In teaching breadmaking she starts by giving a demonstration on a certain type of bread. The students then are required to do a home assignment before the next meeting.

Mrs. Pansy Crosby of Parma Route Two, New Madrid County Extension Youth Assistant of the University of Missouri Extension Division, has been teaching homemaking skills to 4-H youths for 39 years. Some canning and freezing advice is offered by Mrs. Crosby together with some well-tested favorite recipes.

Mrs. Crosby says there are a number of requirements a student must meet before completing the course. A student who excels in the art of breadmaking can earn a very nice award, which is a trip to 4-H Congress in Chicago. She said she also hopes she will be able to take some of the students to the state fair at Sedalia this year to give breadmaking demonstrations.

Beyond learning to make bread, the course, which is completed over a period of six or seven meetings, is designed to teach how to plan timing a meal around homemade bread, how to plan nutritious meals, proper table settings, table manners and how to properly serve a meal.

Mrs. Crosby is sharing a recipe that has been used for many years for a basic bread dough. It is the recipe used by Ann Sillers, who was the first home agent in the county extension service, she said.

Another yeast dough recipe submitted by Mrs. Crosby includes riced potatoes. The rolls are called potato rusks and the dough is easily adapted for a delicious rich- tasting coffee cake.

As a farmer's wife, Mrs. Crosby continues to can, freeze and preserve homegrown vegetables and fruits, but on a much smaller scale than when her three sons were growing up.

"With three boys who would eat everything before it ate them, I would can or freeze between 400 and 500 quarts of food," she said.

Most of her canning now is limited to tomatoes, pickles, relishes, jellies and jams. She freezes sweet corn, green beans, lima beans, strawberries, peaches and other fruits.

Two important points she stresses for successfully freezing and canning foods are first, to start with a good quality of produce that is not too mature, and secondly, to observe the proper timing guides.

In freezing foods, Mrs. Crosby says it is very important to blanche the produce for the proper time period, and then to get the vegetables or fruit cool thoroughly before packaging and putting them into the freezer.

It is equally important in canning, she said, to follow the canning guides for the correct processing time, and added that the jars should be properly sterilized and sealed.

A bread and butter pickle recipe that Mrs. Crosby uses is one that has been handed down through the family of her husband's mother.

A favorite dish at family reunions is chicken pie made from a recipe that was used by one of her grandmothers, the late Martha Morris, who journeyed from Georgia in a covered wagon to homestead at Charleston, Mo.

Summing up her work with the 4-H program, Mrs. Crosby says she has had many moments of pride by helping the young people learn and achieve. Her greatest satisfaction, however, has come in the past two years since she organized the first 4-H Clubs for special education students.

These students, she said, have often been excluded from other clubs or organizations. Based on the level from which they were able to start, Mrs. Crosby said these youths have accomplished the most in their 4-H projects.

"It has been very rewarding to me the way they have responded. They have done exceptionally well and have developed skills with their hands so much more than they have been able to achieve academically," she said.

"To Make the Best Better" is the 4-H motto and the National 4-H Club Pledge reads:

"I Pledge--
My Head to clearer thinking,
My Hands to larger service,
My Heart to greater loyalty,
My Health to better living,
for my club,
my community,
my country and
my world."

During this Bicentennial year as our nation celebrates its 200 years of freedom and the great heritage of our country, it is also most appropriate to offer a salute to Mrs. Crosby, and to all the other dedicated men and women who are guided by the 4-H pledge in teaching and training the young people who will be responsible for America's future.

4-H leader shares skills

By NADINE S. TOWNSEND

NEW MADRID — "To turn an ordinary meal into a company dinner, have a hot yeast bread," is the advice Mrs. Pansy Crosby of Parma Route Two gives to 4-H members in her breadmaking classes.

Mrs. Crosby, New Madrid County Extension Youth Assistant of the University of Missouri Extension Division, has been involved in the 4-H program since 1937 when she became a leader of the New Hope 4-H Club. She succeeded her husband Wendell's mother, Mrs. John Crosby, now 87, who was the first leader of the club, which was organized in 1932.

Mrs. Crosby says she was the youngest in a large family and, out of necessity, learned homemaking skills at an early age. She made her first dress at the age of nine. Throughout the past 39 years she has been sharing and teaching those skills to hundreds of youngsters in the county-wide 4-H program.

Fir the first 35 of those 39 years, Mrs. Crosby gave of her time and talent as a volunteer club or project leader in the 4-H program. Four years ago she started her youth assistant job professionally.

Currently there are 23 4-H Clubs in the country with approximately 450 youths involved.

Mrs. Crosby says it seems that breadmaking has almost become a lost art among today's homemakers. Recently, however, there has been a revived interest in learning some of the homemaking skills of the past, she said, probably because of the emphasis on the national Bicentennial.

She has just completed teaching two breakmaking classes, one at Gideon and one at Risco. Girls in the classes ranged from 10 to 16 years, and four mothers participated at Gideon. By teaching the mothers, she hopes to gain a project leader for future classes.

In teaching breadmaking she starts by giving a demonstration on a certain type of bread. The students then are required to do a home assignment before the next meeting.

Mrs. Pansy Crosby of Parma Route Two, New Madrid County Extension Youth Assistant of the University of Missouri Extension Division, has been teaching homemaking skills to 4-H youths for 39 years. Some canning and freezing advice is offered by Mrs. Crosby together with some well-tested favorite recipes.

Mrs. Crosby says there are a number of requirements a student must meet before completing the course. A student who excels in the art of breadmaking can earn a very nice award, which is a trip to 4-H Congress in Chicago. She said she also hopes she will be able to take some of the students to the state fair at Sedalia this year to give breadmaking demonstrations.

Beyond learning to make bread, the course, which is completed over a period of six or seven meetings, is designed to teach how to plan timing a meal around homemade bread, how to plan nutritious meals, proper table settings, table manners and how to properly serve a meal.

Mrs. Crosby is sharing a recipe that has been used for many years for a basic bread dough. It is the recipe used by Ann Sillers, who was the first home agent in the county extension service, she said.

Another yeast dough recipe submitted by Mrs. Crosby includes riced potatoes. The rolls are called potato rusks and the dough is easily adapted for a delicious rich- tasting coffee cake.

As a farmer's wife, Mrs. Crosby continues to can, freeze and preserve homegrown vegetables and fruits, but on a much smaller scale than when her three sons were growing up.

"With three boys who would eat everything before it ate them, I would can or freeze between 400 and 500 quarts of food," she said.

Most of her canning now is limited to tomatoes, pickles, relishes, jellies and jams. She freezes sweet corn, green beans, lima beans, strawberries, peaches and other fruits.

Two important points she stresses for successfully freezing and canning foods are first, to start with a good quality of produce that is not too mature, and secondly, to observe the proper timing guides.

In freezing foods, Mrs. Crosby says it is very important to blanche the produce for the proper time period, and then to get the vegetables or fruit cool thoroughly before packaging and putting them into the freezer.

It is equally important in canning, she said, to follow the canning guides for the correct processing time, and added that the jars should be properly sterilized and sealed.

A bread and butter pickle recipe that Mrs. Crosby uses is one that has been handed down through the family of her husband's mother.

A favorite dish at family reunions is chicken pie made from a recipe that was used by one of her grandmothers, the late Martha Morris, who journeyed from Georgia in a covered wagon to homestead at Charleston, Mo.

Summing up her work with the 4-H program, Mrs. Crosby says she has had many moments of pride by helping the young people learn and achieve. Her greatest satisfaction, however, has come in the past two years since she organized the first 4-H Clubs for special education students.

These students, she said, have often been excluded from other clubs or organizations. Based on the level from which they were able to start, Mrs. Crosby said these youths have accomplished the most in their 4-H projects.

"It has been very rewarding to me the way they have responded. They have done exceptionally well and have developed skills with their hands so much more than they have been able to achieve academically," she said.

"To Make the Best Better" is the 4-H motto and the National 4-H Club Pledge reads:

"I Pledge--
My Head to clearer thinking,
My Hands to larger service,
My Heart to greater loyalty,
My Health to better living,
for my club,
my community,
my country and
my world."

During this Bicentennial year as our nation celebrates its 200 years of freedom and the great heritage of our country, it is also most appropriate to offer a salute to Mrs. Crosby, and to all the other dedicated men and women who are guided by the 4-H pledge in teaching and training the young people who will be responsible for America's future.

ACTION QUICK

(Basic Bread Dough)

2 tbs. sugar
2 tsps. salt
2½ tbsp. shortening

Scald milk and add and stir in sugar, salt, and shortening. Cool to lukewarm.

Measure into bowl 1 cup lukewarm water and sprinkle or crumble in 2 packages yeast, dry or compressed. Let stand until dissolved, stir. Add lukewarm milk mixture. Add and stir in 3 cups sifted all-purpose flour. Beat until smooth. Add and stir in about an additional 3 cups sifted all-purpose flour.

Turn dough out on lightly floured board. Knead. Place in greased bowl and brush top lightly with melted shortening. Cover with clean towel; let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk— about 50 minutes.

Divide into two equal portions, shape into two loaves and place in loaf pans 7½ x 3½ x 2¾ inches. Let rise again and then bake at 375 degrees for about 50 minutes.

Croutes au fromage

A sophisticated substitute for cheese and crackers served as hors d'oeuvres, snacks, soup partners or dessert are Croutes au Fromage (pronounced "kroot zoh fro-mazh"). Literally translated as cheese croutons, they are actually wafer-like rounds of cheese pastry filled with additional cheese. This version features the complementary flavors of Cheddar cheese in the pastry rounds with Swiss or Gruyere spread between.

Accompany them with tomato juice for an appetizer or snack, with soup for lunch, or with fresh fruits for dessert.

1/2 cup (1 stick) Margarine
2 cups unsifted flour
1/4 teaspoon salt
Generous dash cayenne pepper
2 cups grated Cheddar cheese
6 tablespoons heavy cream
1 egg, beaten
1 1/2 cups grated Gruyere or Swiss cheese

(1) Cut 6 tablespoons margarine into flour, salt and cayenne pepper. Cut in Cheddar cheese. (2) Stir in heavy cream until mixture leaves sides of bowl and forms a ball.

(3) Roll dough out to 1/8-inch thickness. (4) Cut into rounds using 2-inch cookie cutter. Brush with beaten egg and place on ungreased baking sheets. Bake in hot oven (425°F.) about 8 minutes, or until delicately browned.

Just before serving, cream remaining 2 tablespoons margarine into Gruyere or Swiss cheese. (5) Spread mixture on half the rounds. Top with remaining rounds. (6) Bake in hot oven (425°F.) about 2 minutes, or until cheese is melted. Makes 32 appetizers.

1 small can pimento

Charleston

MEAT CASSEROLE

2 heaping tbsp. butter
1 lb. ground lean chuck (coarsely ground)
1 small onion
2 cans (No. 2) Spanish rice
Few strips pimento
1 can mushrooms, sauted in butter
2 cups grated cheddar cheese
1 large green pepper

Slice green pepper in strips and cook in water until tender. Butter casserole and add half the mixture to casserole. Sprinkle with cheese and cracker meal. Add remainder of mixture and sprinkle cheese on top.

Heat well (about 10 minutes in 350 degree oven.)

PIZZA BURGERS

2 lbs. ground chuck
1 cup chopped onion
1 cup chopped green pepper
Clove of garlic

Brown the above ingredients in small amount of grease. Dice and add:

8 ozs. pepperoni
2 (6-oz.) can mushrooms
Three packages of grated cheese
Add salt and pepper to taste

Butter inside of hamburger buns. Spread with mixture and wrap in foil. Heat in 350 degree oven for 20 minutes. Makes 24 or more sandwiches.

TUNA TIMBALES

Good flavor because it's not packed with a filler.

¾ cup milk
¼ cup soft breadcrumbs
6½-ounce can chunk-style light tuna

In a medium mixing bowl beat eggs slightly. Scald milk and gradually beat into eggs. Add breadcrumbs and undrained tuna; with a fork mix well, breaking up tuna. Turn into 4 buttered 6-ounce custard cups. Place in a pan of hot water, having water come halfway up cups. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a knife inserted in center comes out clean -- about 25 minutes. With a small metal spatula loosen edges and turn out. Garnish, if you like, with a thin slice or wedge of lemon and parsley sprigs. Serve at once. Makes 4 servings.

TUNA BURGERS

Fine dry bread crumbs
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon finely grated, onion, pulp and juice
⅛ teaspoon pepper
6½-ounce can tuna, drained
2 tablespoons butter or margarine

Beat egg slightly; add 2 tablespoons crumbs and the remaining ingredients except the butter. With a fork mix well, mashing tuna. If mixture is too soft to shape, add a few more crumbs. Form into 4 small patties; coat with 2 tablespoons crumbs. Fry in the hot butter in a skillet over fairly low heat, turning to brown on both sides. Makes 2 servings.

POT ROAST

Brown a 4-5 lb. bottom round of beef over high heat in a few teaspoons of oil. Also saute in the fat one large chopped onion. Add three cans of tomato juice to the beef and cook three to four hours, until the meat is fork tender.

Vegetables such as potatoes, carrots, and mushrooms may be added to the beef 30 minutes before cooking time is up. Slice and serve on a heated platter.

MUSTARD CHICKEN

Coat chicken pieces, preferably breasts, with mustard. Then dip pieces in bread crumbs flavored with tarragon. After coating with both mixtures, let dry for about 20 minutes on a rack.

Cooking for a crowd

By ANN O'LEARY
Women's Editor

If you think you've got problems feeding your family, how would you like to feed up to 200 people in a single day?

The staff of the Heritage House Nutrition Program feeds a large number of people daily from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Just like at your house, the menus are carefully planned with an eye for taste and nutritional value. Just like at your house, a lot of thought and care goes into cooking and baking. But when the Nutrition Program staff decides it might be nice to serve pie, they can look forward to making 40 instead of one or two.

Mrs. Dale (Bobbie) White, director of the Nutrition Program, plans the menus for each month. The staff consists of Mrs. White, two cooks per day, and 17 volunteers each day. Persons 60 years of age or older are eligible for free meals.

The Sikeston Nutrition Program began in December of 1973. Funds for the program are provided through Title 7 of the Older American Act.

Four cooks are currently working in the program. They are Irene Kern, Lucille Hanna, Ruby Early and Homer King.

Mrs. Hanna says the biggest problem at first was determining the amounts to be served, but with experience the cooks have learned to judge accurately how much of each item they will need.

"Many of our recipes were family ones which we revised for a large number of people," she says.

Each day, patrons are offered a choice of two meats, four vegetables, dessert, salad and coffee, tea or milk. Cornbread, chicken and turkey are some of the favorite foods.

In addition to serving meals at the Heritage House, the staff also delivers meals to shut-ins who are unable to prepare their own food.

Are you planning a family reunion or other gathering where there will be quite a few people? The nutrition program's cooks have donated the following recipes for those of you who are planning to cook for a crowd. Even if you're not planning such a feat, read over the recipes. They'll make you feel better about cooking supper tonight!

As many as 200 persons a day eat a buffet- style noon meal at the Heritage House, and many linger for conversation with friends.

CRUNCHY HOT POTATO SALAD

4 gallons water, boiling
4 pounds sliced potatoes
2 pounds bacon
2 ½ pounds onion, chopped
2 ½ cups vinegar
2 cups water
9 oz. sugar
2 tbsp. salt
1 tsp. pepper
1 cup chives, chopped

Add salt to boiling water. Add potatoes; cover. Simmer 15 minutes or until potatoes are tender. (Do not over-cook). Drain well.

Fry bacon until crisp. Drain; save fat. Crumble bacon.

Cooking for a crowd

By ANN O'LEARY
Women's Editor

If you think you've got problems feeding your family, how would you like to feed up to 200 people in a single day?

The staff of the Heritage House Nutrition Program feeds a large number of people daily from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Just like at your house, the menus are carefully planned with an eye for taste and nutritional value. Just like at your house, a lot of thought and care goes into cooking and baking. But when the Nutrition Program staff decides it might be nice to serve pie, they can look forward to making 40 instead of one or two.

Mrs. Dale (Bobbie) White, director of the Nutrition Program, plans the menus for each month. The staff consists of Mrs. White, two cooks per day, and 17 volunteers each day. Persons 60 years of age or older are eligible for free meals.

The Sikeston Nutrition Program began in December of 1973. Funds for the program are provided through Title 7 of the Older American Act.

Four cooks are currently working in the program. They are Irene Kern, Lucille Hanna, Ruby Early and Homer King.

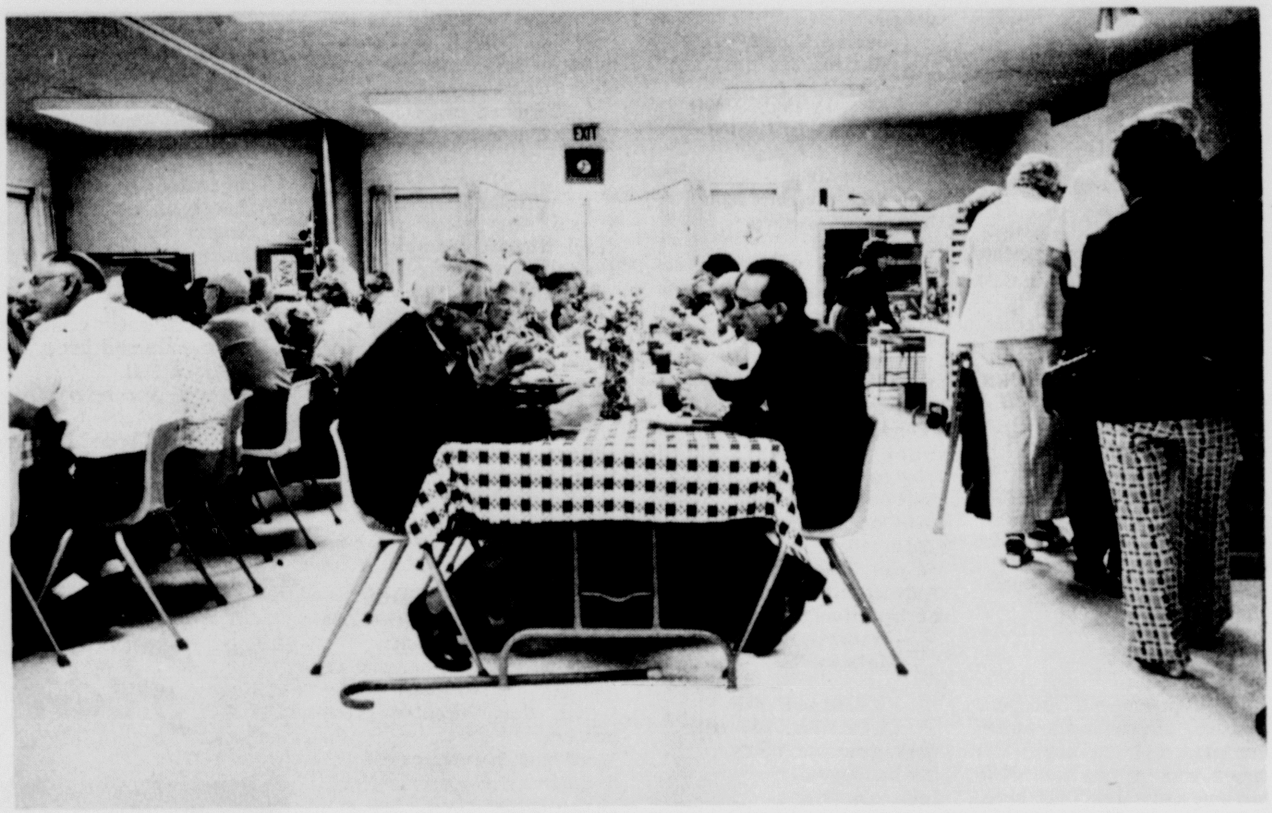
Mrs. Hanna says the biggest problem at first was determining the amounts to be served, but with experience the cooks have learned to judge accurately how much of each item they will need.

"Many of our recipes were family ones which we revised for a large number of people," she says.

Each day, patrons are offered a choice of two meats, four vegetables, dessert, salad and coffee, tea or milk. Cornbread, chicken and turkey are some of the favorite foods.

In addition to serving meals at the Heritage House, the staff also delivers meals to shut-ins who are unable to prepare their own food.

Are you planning a family reunion or other gathering where there will be quite a few people? The nutrition program's cooks have donated the following recipes for those of you who are planning to cook for a crowd. Even if you're not planning such a feat, read over the recipes. They'll make you feel better about cooking supper tonight!



As many as 290 persons a day eat a buffet- style noon meal at the Heritage House, and many linger for conversation with friends.

Cucumber canapes

3-ounce package cream cheese, at room temperature
3¾-ounce can brisling sardines, well-drained
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 teaspoons finely grated onion, pulp and juice
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
Small fresh bread rounds
Thinly sliced cucumber, pared if waxed
Mayonnaise
Pimiento cutouts

Beat together the cream cheese, sardines, lemon juice, onion, salt and Worcestershire until as smooth as possible. Chill, tightly covered, overnight to blend flavors and have firm. Makes a couple of tablespoons less than a cup. Shortly before serving, spread sardine mixture on bread rounds; top each with a slice of cucumber, a dot of mayonnaise and a pimiento cutout. (Tiny canape cutters make pretty cutouts in varied shapes.) The number of canapes made will depend on how thickly the sardine mixture is spread. The bread rounds should be a little larger than the largest slice of cucumber.

Fish fillets

One of nature's most delectable treats, fresh fish should always be cooked with care. Overcooking toughens fish and gives it a "fishy" taste, according to home economists for Meadow Gold Dairies. Fish is properly cooked when you can flake it with a fork; then remove it immediately from the range. Fish responds well to a delicate saute, made by coating fish fillets (fresh or frozen) with buttermilk, cornmeal, and flour; sauteeing in butter, and serving with a Tangy Sour Cream Sauce. The cream sauce calls for both sour cream and buttermilk to give it that tangy taste.

GOLDEN FISH FILLETS
(4 to 6 servings)

2 lbs. fish fillets
½ cup each yellow cornmeal and flour
½ cup Meadow Gold buttermilk
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ cup (1 stick) Meadow Gold butter
Tangy Sour Cream Sauce (recipe below)

Cut fish into serving-size pieces. Combine cornmeal and flour in a shallow pan. Pour buttermilk into bowl. Dip each piece of fish in buttermilk; drain briefly. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Dip in cornmeal mixture to coat lightly on both sides. In hot butter, in frying pan, brown fish over medium heat until it is golden on both sides and flakes easily with a fork, about 5 minutes. Serve immediately with Tangy Sour Cream Sauce.

TANGY SOUR CREAM SAUCE

1 cup Meadow Gold sour cream
2 tablespoons Meadow Gold buttermilk
3 tablespoons chopped stuffed olives
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika

Combine ingredients and let stand 30 minutes to blend flavors.

Strawberries tempt the taster

Entertaining on a budget has its rewards when fresh strawberries are plentiful. Prices are relatively low and that's good news for your purse..

Even though you wish the budget could stretch for a dinner party, you should know instinctively that a spectacular in-season fruit dessert can be as pleasing as a six-course meal. A beautiful dessert served in your personal style creates a festive mood.

Economy notwithstanding, you want sweet, fresh strawberries. Buy only what you need, and buy no earlier than the day before the party. Look for berries with full red color, bright luster, and firm flesh. Be sure berry cap stems are still attached.

If there are any uncolored areas or large seedy areas, this is your clue to poor flavor and texture. don't select strawberries with a shrunken appearance or softness because they may be overripe. Remember, too, that mold can spread rapidly from one berry to another.
